Senate Votes Railway Pay Rise; Flouts Warnings

Only 3 Democrats Protest as Ballot Of 74 to 4 Ignores Byrnes and Vinson

By Robert C. Albright

In the face of blunt warnings by the President's top stabilization officials, the Senate yesterday voted 74 to 4 to grant a flat 8-cent-an-hour increase to 1,097,000 non-operating railway employes.

Both Mobilization Director Byrnes and Stabilization Director Vinson had opposed the resolution fruitlessly as a mortal blow at the wavering "Little Steel" formula.

Despite Vinson's unqualified notice that a rail wage break-through would crack the wage line and force abandonment of the formula for other groups, Administration Senators voted to a man for the across-the-board increase.

Only Two Speak Up

Only two Democrats spoke against it—Senators Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina and Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana. Two Republicans voted with Bailey and Ellender against the measure—Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg and Homer Ferguson of Michigan.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia also announced his opposition to the bill on a paired vote.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, in one of his rare collisions with Administration policy, joined Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat) of Missouri in leading the rail wage revolt.

Barkley praised the job done by Byrnes and Vinson, but said "these matters can't be settled on the basis of personal admiration." Like Truman, author of the resolution, he denied the resolution would violate the wage formula, or collapse the stabilization machine.

Barkley referred indirectly to his own unsuccessful efforts to compromise the dispute:

"It would have been better if this matter could have been adjusted without being brought before Congress." Since the bill was before the Senate, he said, "we'd be remiss in our duty if we did not discharge our responsibility as we see it."

Earlier, Senator Ellender tried to persuade the Senate to postpone action on the Truman resolution until the food subsidy issue is disposed of.

Bailey Makes Appeal

If Congress bans subsidies, thus lifting the lid on prices, he said he himself would vote for the wage increase. But a congressional order for a flat rail wage increase now, he declared, would be "the opening wedge" for a general breakthrough on prices and wages.

In the closing minutes of debate, Senator Bailey also urged the Senate not to repudiate hold-the-line powers Congress delegated. Bailey warned that the increase, although "popular" today, will be condemned by the people once the inflation dikes break:

"If we do open the doors and in-

Measure to Strip OPA of Power Pushed in House

The House Agriculture Committee plans to press for immediate action on its measure to strip the Office of Price Administration of control over food prices and place them under a single food czar.

The decision was reached yesterday on an 8 to 7 vote when the committee instructed its chairman to appear before the Rules Committee and request a green light for the legislation.

Approved several weeks ago by the Agriculture Committee, the measure was subsequently allowed to gather dust in the Rules Committee files.

Doubled Movie Levy Approved

Senate Group Pares 26 Million Off Tax Bill

By the Associated Press

Senate Finance Committeemen tore another $26,400,000 corner off the tax bill yesterday, rejecting in the process a proposal to tax race track betting while approving doubled taxes on movie tickets and admissions to other entertainment.

Knocking out the House-approved 5 per cent tax on pari-mutuel wagering, together with minor excise changes, accounted for the reduction which cut prospective revenue under the tattered measure to $1,922,700,000 extra a year.

The total now left in the bill is well below one-fifth of the 10½ billions extra funds sought by the Treasury. To date, for every $100 Secretary Morgenthau asked, the Senators have voted $18.31. Further revisions are expected when the committee takes up controversial changes voted by the House in corporate and individual income rates.

The rejected pari-mutuel tax was opposed in open hearings by Gov. Spessard L. Holland of Florida, Herbert Bayard Swope, New York Racing Commissioner, and others who declared the levy would destroy racing.

The more numerous but evidently less persuasive representatives of the amusement industry—principally movie owners—failed to block a 100 per cent boost in the admissions tax. Subject, as are all the committee's decisions, to Senate action, will mean a tax of 2 cents on ever dime of admission charge.

The committee accepted a House increase in the jewelry tax from 10 to 20 per cent, but stipulated that the 10 per cent rate would continue to apply to watches retailing for less than $65 and alarm clocks selling for less than $5.

In line with previous approved increases in the taxes on whisky and beer, the committee accepted the new House rates on wines, 50 to 100 per cent higher than at present.

Although all House excise tax changes have been disposed of, several new proposals await action.

Disunity Trend Menaces U. S., Rayburn Says

Assails Carping Criticism of Allies In House Speech

By International News Service

Speaker Sam Rayburn took the floor of a strife-torn House yesterday to sound a plea for unity and denounce what he termed "dangerous trends" in evidence in the United States.

He spoke to a House that has thrown back in the lap of the Administration its tax, subsidy and other programs it deems necessary to the war effort, and declared it is more important to think about winning the war than the position of some groups following war.

The Speaker spoke extemporaneously in one of his rare speeches to the House and was given a standing ovation from Democrats and Republicans.

"We would not know this war was on from the standpoint of sacrifice if we did not read the newspapers, listen to the radio, or note the vacant chairs," he said.

Rayburn said there are "dangerous trends" in this country that, if continued, will be harmful to unity between the United States and her allies in the global conflict. He mentioned specifically discussions of the attitudes of postwar England and Russia.

Criticizes Patton Agitation

He criticized continuation of agitation over the General Patton soldier-slapping incident and complaints about the Administration's handling of domestic affairs.

"Somebody says, 'What is Russia going to do after the war?' What I am interested in, in 1943 and 1944, is what Russia is doing now," he said.

"Anything calculated to bring about disunity between ourselves and our allies is dangerous talk. It is an insult to the intelligence of the American people to imply that we are not capable of sitting

Rommel Reported Now in Denmark

Stockholm, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Germans officially announced in Copenhagen tonight that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, commander of German forces in the Balkans, had arrived in the Danish capital.

Reports reaching Stockholm told of German activity to improve coastal defenses in the Nazi-occupied nation on Germany's northern flank.

Price Assails Busybody Censorship

Ignore 'Volunteer' Advisers, He Tells Press and Radio

By the Associated Press

The Office of Censorship came out in strong language last night for the printing of still more war news, urging the Nation's press and radio to ignore "volunteer" censors who would tell them what not to publish.

Without stating whether Army or Navy officers, or others, were referred to, Director of Censorship Byron Price said in a note to editors distributed through the major news services:

"I solicit your continued cooperation to see, in this instance, that a dangerous psychology of over-censorship is not created throughout the land by the activities of a miscellany of volunteer firemen."

Price announced that new editions of the press and broadcasters codes of voluntary censorship, under which pres sand radio are operating, wil lbe made known today.

He said:

"Every editor and broadcaster is asked to take note not only of what is requested, but of what is not requested. . . . Many of you have been led by overzealousness to withhold information having no security value, on the advice of persons having no authaority. . . .

"The Office of Censorship, a civilian agency, is the only Government agency authorized by the President to request that certain news be not published or broadcast."

"The codes specifically ask that requests from others which appear out of harmony with the codes (of censorship) be disregarded or submitted to this office.

O'Hara bagged the planes while flying as a lone fighter cover for an aircraft carrier. President Roosevelt characterized his feat as "one of the most daring, if not the most daring, single action in the history of combat aviation."

If Present Goals Stand

Million Prewar Fathers Face Draft Within Next 6 Months

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, has estimated that about one million pre-Pearl Harbor fathers must be inducted into the armed forces by June 30, 1944, to meet present schedules, it was disclosed yesterday.

Speaking at a closed meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York City, Hershey estimated that approximately two million men must be inducted by the middle of next year to bring the Army and Navy up to their announced combined goal of 11.3 millions.

Youths coming of age, expiring occupational deferments and men reclassified out of 4-F will provide almost one million of the two million required, according to Hershey.

The figures revealed by Hershey in effect confirmed indications of the existence of a substantial lag in the induction of men into the armed forces—perhaps 300,000 to 400,000 by the end of this year—which must be made up during the first six months of next year if the desired goal is to be reached.

Because of this lag, the calls for the armed services will have to remain at present levels through June 30, 1944, Hershey was said to have indicated. If schedules had been maintained, the tapering process for the Army would have started January 1, 1944, with the normal induction rate for the Navy continuing to June 30 of next year.

Three factors account for the lag: (1) Uncertainty over the fathers' draft and a consequent reluctance of draft boards to call fathers, (2) a failure of recruiting

Reds Repel Violent Blows In Kiev Area

Soviets Stand Firm As Epic Tank Battle Rages, Smash Ahead In Dnieper Bend

London (Friday), Dec. 10 (AP).—Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's Army beat down mass German attacks yesterday west of Kiev where one of the epic tank battles of the war is raging, while another Soviet army plunged on five miles inside the Dnieper Bend to within 18 miles of the enemy's citadel at Kirovograd.

A midnight Moscow communique said General Vatutin's army, which had given up ground for two days in the area northeast of Chernyakhov, 80 miles west of Kiev, had inflicted "very heavy losses" on the enemy's manpower.

Although the Russians have wrecked 350 German tanks and cut down more than 5000 out of the waves of attacking enemy infantrymen in four days, the Axis still was making ceaseless efforts to break through toward Kiev.

15 Localities Captured

Inside the Dnieper Bend the Russians captured 15 more localities, including the rail station of Mederovo, on the already-cut Znamenka-Nikolaev railway. That represented a five-mile gain from Sharovka and put Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's troops on the edge of a highway leading 18 miles westward to Kirovograd.

Mederovo is 10 miles south of the rail hub prize of Znamenka, where defending German troops are threatened increasingly with encirclement. Other Russian units are six miles north of Znamenka, 10 miles to the east, and 12 miles to the northwest. Hence the junction is almost surrounded.

The Germans were reported pouring into battle their tank and infantry reserves in a supreme effort to regain a part of their lost Dnieper line and relieve enormous Soviet pressure in White Russia to the north and in the Dnieper bend to the southeast.

The seizure of Mederovo narrowed to 20 miles the Nazi escape corridor from Znamenka to Kirovograd.

Trap Threatened

Completion of this loop probably would trap huge enemy forces, and have repercussions throughout the Dnieper bend. The Russians already are dangerously close to linking their forces in the area with those in the Smela sector, 50 miles northwest of Znamenka. Smela is another German-held rail junction controlling the routes to the Rumanian frontier.

The Berlin announcer, Capt. Lugwig Sertorius, said the Russians northwest of Znamenka already had linked up with those driving on Smela from Cherkasy.

This report was doubted here because the two Soviet groups appear to be about 35 miles apart on the basis of Russia accounts, but Sertorius might have been preparing his listeners for a big German retreat.

Turks Wage 'Nerve War' On Germans

Foreign Minister Significantly Bars Axis Newsmen From Press Conference

By Wade Werner

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—Turkey, emerging from the Cairo conference as a full-fledged participant in the Allied war of nerves, kept the Germans guessing today with poker-faced, semiofficial utterances on just how and when and where she will shift to a more active collaboration.

Turkish Foreign Minister Numan Menemencioglu told a press conference in Ankara, from which Axis newsmen significantly were excluded, that at Cairo "we reached a thorough understanding" and that "our alliance with Britain emerged considerably strengthened."

To the question of whether Turkey was closer to war, Menemencioglu replied cryptically that Turkish foreign policy was unchanged and, maintaining a poker-face, he agreed with correspondents who suggested that Turkey could be said to have entered the Allied camp. "But without being a belligerent," he added.

Although stressing that there was no "signing of documents" at Cairo, he quickly added that "such an understanding can be closer than one on paper."

Germans Betray Uneasiness

Adding further Turkish fire to the war of nerves against Germany, the semiofficial Turkish newspaper Ulus said of the results at Cairo: "Germany is now faced with a political and military coalition that has not a single flaw or weak spot in its construction."

Nazi propaganda responded to all this by repeating Menemencioglu's line that Turkey's "foreign policy is unchanged," but neutral reports indicated that the German high command was not similarly convinced. The Nazis were said to be moving troops into Greece and Bulgaria post haste.

The challenge flung in Hitler's face by Turkey's frank alignment with the destroyers of his European realm was seen here as a test of Germany's ability to open yet another front by attacking without waiting to be attacked.

It was recalled that in 1940 Hitler needed very little encouragement to send mechanized legions plunging across neutral borders. The question now is whether he could summon strength for an effective drive into Turkey.

Making the first authoritative statement since his and President Inonu's return from the meeting at Cairo, the Foreign Minister called the conference "one of the most important events in this phase of the war," and asserted: "We came back from Cairo very content and satisfied."

He declared repeatedly that Turkey and America are very close and said that five minutes after they first met Roosevelt and Inonu

Treasury Gets $880,000 Break, Crooner Sinatra Flunks Draft

By Bob Considine

New York, Dec. 9 (INS).—Frank Sinatra, emaciated Romeo of the Nation's juke box addicts, may be 4-F so far as the Army is concerned, but he's still a juicy 1-A in the eyes of another agency of Uncle Sam—the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The boney pin-up boy of millions of moonstruck girls flunked his Army physical examination today at a Newark induction center. He has a perforated eardrum—self inflicted by too many renditions of "As Time Goes By," his enemies on Broadway say. But he's still a latter-day Midas, in the eyes of the tax office. He may not be able to fight for the Army but he'll go a long way toward supporting it in the manner to which it is accustomed.

Instead of going on the Army payroll at $50 a month, and eating and equipping himself at the expense of the taxpayers, Sinatra will go back to his swooning audiences and net a million dollars during the next year.

Last week in Boston, at the RKO-Boston Theater, he grossed $61,005 — slightly rupturing the theater's old record of $40,000. Ninety-nine-cent seats for his opening performance at Pittsburgh tomorrow are selling for $10, it is alarmingly reported.

Sinatra now owns himself, Uncle Sam—who had to share him with many other stockholders—will be glad to know. Sinatra until recently was cut up like an orphanage

Driven Off Key Heights in Italy, Germans Claw Back Savagely

La Difensa Seizure Called One of War's Great Infantry Feats

By Don Whitehead

With the United States Fifth Army, Dec. 8 (Delayed) (AP).—A gray-haired brigadier general, an old infantryman himself, declared today the doughboy's capture of La Difensa and Maggiore Mountains on the road to Rome was one of the greatest achievements of the Infantry in this war.

The Battle of Lookout Mountain, he said, could not be compared to the fight which began five days ago.

"Pile three Lookout Mountains on top of each other," he said, "and you get an idea of what those boys did.

"It was guts all the way."

The attack began on Maggiore and La Difensa on the morning of December 3, with the heaviest artillery barrage of the Italian campaign.

On top of these two great masses, towering above the others north of the main highway, the Germans were able to observe the movements of the Allied troops.

Attacked in Rain

After the attack began, rain fell, to make the operations even more difficult for the Americans.

"The roads were terrible," the general said, "and it was a disheartening thing to see some of the supply dumps we built up with so much effort wiped out by enemy artillery fire.

"The initial phase went well right up the slopes of Difensa, and two units were on the peak and spread over Maggiore before the Germans realized they were there.

"Our boys dug in during the night and the next morning went after them in hand-to-hand fighting to clean them out of caves, dugouts and pillboxes. There were a lot of snipers, well concealed, and they had to be found one by one. It took the doughboys four days to get them out.

"No one can imagine the terrain without climbing it himself. It took 16 hours for troops to carry a box of 'C' rations 2 miles to the peak and return to the supply dump at the foot of the mountain.

"In some places, the troops had to pull themselves up the slope by means of a rope tied to trees or rocks. That's bad enough without any load on your back, but they

Nazis Push Squadrons Of Tanks Into Heavy Fighting in Adriatic Area

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Dec. 9 (AP).—Driven from the crests of a chain of mountain ridges which formed the hard outer wall of their carefully prepared defenses before Rome, the Germans, their backs to the upper Garigliano River, fought back savagely today against the unrelenting pressure of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army.

On the Adriatic end of the Italian front the Nazis waged an equally desperate battle to hold the line guarding the important port of Pescara and the inland city of Chieti, throwing squadrons of tanks into a particularly heavy battle raging around the town of Orsogna, 10 miles from the sea.

British Storm Ridge

An Allied communique referred cautiously to "several inconclusive counterattacks" launched by the enemy against the Fifth Army, but there was no official indication whether they cost Clark's forces any of the ground they won in the last week's hard fighting.

British troops stormed and took a ridge of Mount Croce, two and one-half miles southwest of the summit of Mount Camino and only a mile from the Garigliano. Mount Croce's 3000-foot summit was seized a month ago at the same time the Fifth Army smashed enemy defenses on Massico Ridge near the Tyrrhenian Sea.

(Units of Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio's Italian army were declared in German broadcasts to have moved into action alongside United States forces on the American sector of the Fifth Army front, the BBC reported.)

Clark's wariors, pshing down the western slopes of Mount Maggiore and Mount Camino toward the flatlands leading to the major German stronghold of Cassino, wiped out all by-passed enemy pockets except on the northwestern tip of the Maggiore incline and in the small village of Rocca Devandro, nestled against Camino.

Front-line reports gave this summary of the situation today:

American and British units hold all high ground on three mountains—Camino, Maggiore and Croce—dominating from the south and southwest the lower edges of the broad valley in which the Liri

Treasury Moves to Smash Liquor Black Market in Nation

By Ben W. Gilbert

Noting a partial return of many of the evils of prohibition days due to wartime liquor supply and price conditions, the Treasury Department announced yesterday that it has launched a Nationwide investigation to smash the liquor black market and invoke revenue laws against offenders.

The drive is being conducted by the 1100 investigators of the Treasury's Alcohol Tax Unit and is "resulting in numerous civil and criminal cases against violators," the Treasury said.

Offenses being uncovered, according to a carefully phrased Treasury statement, include:

A revival of moonshining, revealed by an increase in the number of illegal stills seized.

Failure of wholesalers to keep required records of sales and falsification of these records.

Peddling of liquor outside regular trade channels without retail permits—presumably as a device for charging above-ceiling prices.

Counterfeiting of revenue stamps and labels.

Cutting and false labeling conspiracies.

Importation of synthetic and substandard spirits falsely labled.

Stewart Berkshire, head of the alcohol tax unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, pointed out that the Office of Price Administration has direct responsibility for violations of price regulations and State and liquor control boards are responsible for rationing restrictions on liquor consumption.

However, it was understood that the inquiry was started on the assumption that many price-ceiling

Another Step

The south-central Pacific island of Naura, which lies astride one of the most direct routes from Hawaii to the southwest Pacific and is an outpost for the big Jap base of Truk, has been subjected to a sea and air assault by "strong forces" of the fleet, the Navy announced last night.

The attack on December 8 (West Longitude date) was carried out by carrier aircraft and ship bombardment, and while the blow was heavy the "details are not now available," the communique stated.

In addition to the attack on Nauru, between the American-occupied Gilberts and the Solomons, both Army and Navy planes again hit the Marshall Islands, northwest of the Gilberts.

At Jaluit, a patrol boat was sunk and a medium-sized freighter and two small vessels were damaged. Other Japanese bases raided in the Marshalls were Mille, Taroa and Maloelap, and at the latter one of eight enemy interceptor planes was shot down, while our Liberators suffered only minor damage. Navy planes assaulted Jaluit and Mille, while Army craft hit the other two bases.

Nauru Island has the advantage of being a good observation post from which to watch ship movements in the direction of or from the great Japanese naval base at Truk, well to the north and west.

The communique suggested that Nauru was coming in for the same kind of heavy drubbing as has been given the Japanese positions in the Marshalls. Carrier task forces which attacked enemy installations in the Marshalls on December 4 sank two light cruisers and four other auxiliaries and destroyed 72 planes.

The fact that warships were able to go within 10 to 20 miles of oft-raided Nauru, a phosphate producing island, demonstrated the extent to which repeated attacks have weakened some of the enemy's bases.

Nauru was hit by a carrier force in September and again in Novem-

Aussies Take Wareo, Huon Jungle Point

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Friday), Dec. 10 (AP).—Wareo, a strong, natural defense point in the Huon Peninsula jungles of northeastern New Guinea and an important hub for Japanese supply lines, was captured Wednesday by Australians after a six-day assault, it was announced today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The new success accelerated the campaign to drive out the Japanese from the entire Huon Peninsula, which is separated at the closest point by only 70 miles of water from the invasion-menaced, pivotal Japanese island of New Britain.

Pointing to the possibility of such an invasion, Allied air forces steadily maintained the daily series of attacks on New Britain bases closest to New Guinea.

At Cape Gloucester Allied planes attacked through the tenth straight day.

Over the invaded Solomon Island of Bougainville Admiral Halsey's planes moved at will, hampered only by bad weather. Mitchells hit Kieta's Harbor on the east-central coast, and Kahili airdrome on the south coast in operations Tuesday. A Japanese floatplane was shot down by Venturas

Ship Output Up

Five Billion For Invasion Navy Passed

By James F. King

Acting with such speed that the Senate and House passed separate and almost identical bills for the purpose, Congress yesterday moved to give the Navy the authority to spend about $5,300,000,000 for invasion craft, auxiliary vessels and other ships which Secretary Knox requested two weeks ago.

At the same time the Maritime Commission revealed for the first time details of November's record-breaking production of 164 ships in American merchant yards.

The commission reported the delivery of 4 escort aircraft carriers, 2 tank carriers, 1 troop transport, 87 Liberty ships, 19 standard tankers and 17 emergency tankers, 16 C-type ships, 9 frigates, 3 seagoing tugs, 4 concrete barges, 1 private coastal tanker and 1 ore carrier.

The deadweight tonnage of ships delivered in November was 1,692,763, with West Coast yards producing 45.92 per cent; East Coast, 33.27 per cent; Gulf Coast, 19.35 per cent, and Great Lakes, 1.46 per cent. The merchant yards in December need beat the November output by only 3000 tons to top the year's goal of 18,890,000 tons.

The Permanents Metals Corp., Henry J. Kaiser's yard at Richmond, Calif., was the leading producer, with 26 Liberty ships delivered. The Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, Inc., at Baltimore turned out 20 Liberty ships and Oregon Shipbuilding Corp. at Portland, Oreg., delivered 14 of the same type. Another large producer was California Shipbuilding Corp. at Wilmington, Calif., with 11 emergency type tankers.

The bills passed by the Senate and House yesterday, one of which must now be passed by the other body, would authorize expenditures for 2,500,000 tons of auxiliary vessels and 1,000,000 tons of landing and patrol craft.

Partisans Already Pledged Major Part Of British Help

By the Associated Press

General Anglo-American policy emerged yesterday with a disclosure that the United States intends to send its main military support in Yugoslavia to the Partisan forces despite their oppostion to the duly recognized government of King Peter.

Secretary of State Hull, in response to a question at a press conference, affirmed the policy announced in Parliament that Britain was sending more support to the Partisans, headed by Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), than to Gen. Draja Mihailovic, King Peter's minister of war, "for the simple reason that the Partisans are doing more of the fighting."

It was ascertained elsewhere that the United States expects to continue dealing with King Peter's exiled government in Cairo as the official spokesman for Yugoslavia until a plebiscite can be held among the people.

But the United States is gathering its own information on how the two factions inside the country are carrying on the war and details of explosive contacts between them.

Nazis Call on Reserves

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Reich called in still more reinforcements as it flung German and satellite divisions with a prodigal hand aganist the implacable Yugoslav irregulars of Marshal Joseph Broz (Tito).

This battle—a battle in its significance if not in the numbers of troops involved—centered in its Bosnian-Slovenian coastal areas along the lateral routes feeding into the great trunk rail and highway communications from extreme northern Yugoslavia far down to deep water on the Aegean Sea.

Tito's communique announced the Ljubljana-Trieste Railway had been widely cut and that all rail communication in the Slovenian coast land had been brought to a standstill.

Claiming the new German offensive in Bosnia was costing the Nazis heavily in men, the communique reported Yugoslavs had launched an offensive of their own in the Idia sector in Slovenia, 23 miles from Ljubljana, and the site of Europe's second largest mercury mines.

The Nazi plan, in the greatest effort in Yugoslavia, appeared to secure at any cost the Zagreb-Belgrade-Athens-Bosporus lines—the only interior routes adequate to transport large Allied forces required to repel a full-dress Balkan invasion.

Nazi air support centers again were under strong attack by Flying Fortress and Liberator squadrons from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's command, which heavily smashed at two Nazi air bases near Athens.

became like friends of 40 years' standing.

The minister quoted Inonu as saying, "I have rarely met so pleasant a man as Roosevelt."

When informed of a rumor which persisted in Ankara recently that Turkey and the United States would, as a result of the conference, sign a formal treaty of alliance, Menemencioglu replied, "our comprehension with America is stronger than any written understanding could be. It is absolutely complete."

Nazi-Bulgarian Rift Rumored

London, Dec. 9 (INS).—Persistent reports of a possible break between Bulgaria and Germany as the first concrete results of newly-strengthened Allied-Turkish friendship poured into London tonight.

While the London press cautioned against optimism over the prospect of any early Turkish entry into the war on the side of the Allies, dispatches from Stockholm and other neutral capitals described the tension in Bulgaria as reaching the "crisis stage."

There were new reports of heavy troop movements by the Turks and Germans toward Turkey's European frontier and that the Turkish border had been closed. Whether these measures were prompted by Turkey's new pledge of friendship with the Allies and on Turkey's part, constituted self-protection against the Nazis, or reflected the unrest in Bulgaria was problematical.

Stockholm reported that Bulgarian Premier Doori Boshikoff had summoned a midnight cabinet session in Sofia. This order went out after a meeting with the Turkish minister, Sefti Berker, and followed a conference of high Bulgarian officers and members of the Regency Council ruling the country since the recent death of King Boris.

This politico-military consultation took place while noisy crowds were reported demonstrating for peace in the streets outside. A Stockholm dispatch to the London Evening News said the crowds chanted the slogan: "Bulgaria must get out of the war."

An emergency Parliament session followed.

In connection with the reports of Bulgar-Turkish mobilization, many troop trains were said to have rolled through Sofia recently, heading eastward, and there was a rumor that several Bulgar detachments had rebelled or deserted and gone over to the Greek and Yugoslav Partisans.

The London Daily Mail said that in event of Turkey's entry into the war, the Anglo-American Mediterranean air command will "spread its protective wings" over her speedily.

Admiral Blandy And Captain Kitts Honored by Navy

By the Associated Press

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox yesterday presented medals and awards to five persons, including Rear Admiral William H. P. Blandy and Capt. Willard A. Kitts, 3d, recently nominated for the rank of rear admiral.

Blandy was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service to the Government of the United States" from February 19, 1941, to December 9, 1943, the period during which he served as Ordnance Bureau chief. Admiral Blandy, 53, lives here.

Captain Kitts, 49, whose wife lives in Washington, was awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct as commanding officer of a battleship during the occupation of Attu in May, 1943.

Capt. Howard E. Orem, whose home is at 3341 Rittenhouse st. nw., where he lives with his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Orem, was awarded the Legion of Merit for his handling of the "numerous problems of great magnitude which continually confronted him."

Cuban Ship Sunk

Havana, Dec. 9 (INS).—The Ministry of Defense announced today that the Cuban merchant ship Libertad had been sunk by an enemy submarine off Cape Hatteras, with 25 of its crew of 43 lost.

The Libertad was the fourth Cuban ship to be sunk since Cuba entered the war, shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. It was the former Italian vessel Recca, seized by Cuba late in 1941.

'Fighting 69th' Advances

were carrying equipment and supplies.

"The litter bearers did a magnificent job. It took six men to carry a stretcher off Maggiore with four men in reserve to rest the others. Often they were under mortar and artillery fire."

The general told of one captain who started up the slopes with 40 men carrying supplies to the advance troops. Slipping, scrambling up the trails, they were caught in a concentration of enemy fire. Each time they picked up their burdens and tried again. Finally, the captain was killed, but at the end of 14 hours, his men completed the mission.

The infantry waves going into battle for the hill positions were hampered by morning mists and fog which kept them from seeing the German positions and the artillery from laying down observer fire.

The overcast was so bad that the air force was unable to give them air support.

Twice the Germans counterattacked, one unit under the cover of fog, but the Americans beat them off and continued pushing forward, sometimes directly into the face of enemy machinegun and mortar fire.

The men had little cover on the open, bare slopes of the hill and a gain of 700 yards in one day's fighting is no mean job in view of the importance of the advance.

No Easy Road Ahead

While Clark's fighters had overcome desperate obstacles to win these mountain tops—sometimes literally clawing up steep, muddy slopes with their finger tips in the face of withering enemy fire—there was every reason to believe their progress would continue to be slow and painful across the comparatively open country toward Cassino.

Cassino is at the foot of another mountain mass 7 miles north-northwest of the Fifth Army's advance units, at the other side of a broad valley. The Nazis have had a long time in which to prepare deep defenses.

Swift exploitation of a breakthrough from the mountains appeared impossible for Clark's forces.

In companion drives from the north side of the key valley, American troops overcame fierce German resistance to capture high ground west of Venafro, and still further inland smashed a line of Nazi pillboxes west of Filignano, headquarters reported.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army fought through downpours to improve its positions in the Orsogna area, but official reports did not indicate any important gains.

(The Algiers radio reported the Eighth Army had forced a new crossing of the Moro River in the Orsogna area and had advanced up the Adriatic to within 8 miles of Pescara, terminus of a main lateral highway to Rome.)

Improved weather enabled Flying Fortresses and Liberators to shatter two German airfields outside Athens, Greece, with thousands of fragmentation bombs. One Fortress was lost.

U. S. Losses Light

Aboard a U. S. Carrier in the Central Pacific, Dec. 7 (Delayed) (AP).—Fewer than 10 American planes were shot down and one U. S. aircraft carrier suffered only superficial damage in the smashing raid on the Japanese-held Marshall Islands last Saturday.

Japanese losses included at least 6 ships sunk, including 2 light cruisers, and 72 planes shot down. In addition, 2 cargo ships and 1 troop ship were either sunk or badly damaged and about 30 medium enemy bombers were strafed on the ground with undetermined results.

Two of a group of about 40 torpedo planes were shot down and those that broke through to the flat-tops were able to score only superficial damage on one carrier.

Draft Within Next Six Months Induction by June 30, 1944

for the WAC'S and other auxiliary services to come up to expectations, and (3) a high rate of rejections by the armed forces.

The mathematics of the draft, based on the new information provided by Hershey, is as follows:

November 1 net strength of Army and Navy, 10.1 millions.

Probable strength January 1, 1944, 10.4 millions to 10.5 millions.

Scheduled for January 1, 1944, 10.8 millions.

Probable lag, as of January 1, 300,000 to 400,000.

Net increase required to reach a scheduled 11.3 millions by June 30, 1944, 1.2 millions.

Estimated replacements for eight-month period ending June 30, 1944, 600,000 to 800,000.

Total needed to reach required net strength by June 30, 1944, 1.8 to 2 millions.

The figures, it was pointed out, hinge on the assumption that the actual goals for the Army and Navy are the ones that have been announced. Observers pointed out that a downward revision was possible, however, in view of the fact that the War and Navy Departments have permitted inductions to lag without protest.

It also was pointed out that replacements have begun to loom very large in draft considerations. The Army has stated that it is discharging an average of 70,000 men a month—mainly for physical and mental reasons. Although figures for the Navy are not available, if their replacements run in proportion, a total of 100,000 a month would have to be added to draft calls to take care of replacement needs of the two services.

London Expects Roosevelt Visit

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—The London Daily Herald said today there was "strong feeling" in London that President Roosevelt "might come here before American troops leave these shores" to participate in the final planning of the invasion of Europe from the west.

The newspaper said further that American circles here expect Gen. George C. Marshall, American chief of staff, to set up headquarters as commander in chief of the Allied invasion "in the next few weeks."

Minority Move To 'Destroy' WillkieClaimed

By the Associated Press

Asserting that a small minority of Republicans is attempting to "destroy" Wendell L. Willkie, John Cowles, Minneapolis publisher, last night urged Willkie's renomination in 1944 and replied to charges that Willkie supporters attempted to "buy delegates" at the party's 1940 convention.

Cowles declared Willkie "isn't the kind of fellow who would tolerate any attempt by his supporters to buy delegates' votes." He said the 1940 nominee flatly rejected two offers by individuals "of ability and party standing" who sought a Cabinet post and the vice presidential nomination to swing votes his way at a time during the 1940 Philadelphia meeting when it appeared the nomination might go to Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

Cowles' statement was made in a letter to C. Nelson Sparks, former mayor of Akron, Ohio, author of a book, "One Man—Wendell Willkie," which Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi told the House November 27 contained "an expose of the criminal rigging of the Republican convention at Philadelphia in 1940." Sparks managed the campaign of Publisher Frank Gannett for the presidential nomination in 1940.

In his letter, Cowles, who is president of the Minneapolis Star Journal and Tribune, asserted that "the small minority which is attempting to destroy Willkie" was overlooking the fact that polls showed Willkie "has about twice as much strength among independent voters as any other Republican possibility."

Mentions No Names

"We will need the independent vote if we are to have a Republican victory in 1944," he added.

Without naming the individuals involved in the 1940 convention incident, Cowles said he was in Willkie's hotel room after the fourth ballot when two persons called offering to switch support to him if certain promises were made.

"One suggestion was that he should indicate that he approved the ambition of a certain individual for a Cabinet post, with the expectation that in return a substantial block of votes would be for Willkie instead of Taft on the following ballot," Cowles wrote Sparks. "The other suggestion was that if Willkie would agree to a certain individual for nomination to the Vice Presidency as his running mate, an additional block of votes would be for Willkie instead of Taft."

Cowles said that Willkie "flatly and unequivocally rejected the idea of making any deal of any kind."

"A man who would turn down, as Willkie did, two such proposals to clinch a presidential nomination that he otherwise thought he would ... certainly isn't the kind of fellow who would tolerate any attempt by his supporters to buy delegates' votes," he added.

...on's Report

...ladelphia, Dec. 9 (AP).—John ... Hamilton, former Republican national committeeman, back from a tour of 17 Western States, ... today that Wendell L. Willkie's support for the GOP presidential nomination in 1944 is not as strong as it has been represented.

Hamilton said at a press conference that one of the objectives of his trip was to "tell leaders that any attempt to stampede the 1944 convention eight months in advance was bad politics."

"There was a very definite attempt," he said, "by a relatively very small group of publications, columnists and radio broadcasters, definitely trying to start a stampede through misrepresentation as to the strength in convention delegates for Mr. Willkie. What I thought was misrepresentation turned out to be just that. I certainly did not find the Willkie sentiment as strong as had been put forward."

Hamilton said he found underlying support for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York everywhere. Sentiment favoring Gen. Douglas MacArthur, he added, was "strongest on the West Coast and tapering off as you come eastward."

8 Die, 12 Hurt in Blasts Aboard British Vessels

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—Explosions of an unexplained origin aboard British naval vessels moored at Lerwick, Shetland Islands, killed 8 seamen and injured more than 12, it was learned today.

The explosions, which occurred recently, forced civilian evacuation of the harbor area while other vessels attempted to sink the burning ships by shellfire.

'Cotton Ed' Drives Wedge Into Democrat Line

Smith jumped into the row over the Senate's recent passage of a "States' rights" soldier vote bill to:

1. Heap coals on the head of Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania for charging an "unholy alliance" between Southern Democrats and Republicans to deprive soldiers of the vote.

2. Propose the nomination of Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, for President.

3. Renew the warnings of Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, that the South can be driven by "insults" to form its own Democratic party.

Said Senator Smith: "I want to nominate Harry Byrd for President right now, and call on the Southern States to organize a Democratic party and let us try to get one decent President."

Byrd on Tuesday had called for Guffey's resignation as chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, denying there was "one iota of truth" in the "unholy alliance" charges, and predicting the States would rise to the Senate's call for absentee voting of soldiers.

Smith, who survived the President's 1936 "purge" and will again run for reelection next year, attacked Guffey, the President, the New Deal, "the bureaucrats here who will NOT even let us get shoes to wear," and the "gang" in the party that disparages "Southern Democrats."

Between chews of tobacco, Smith spat out his contempt for "the righteous men whom we were instrumental in putting in office, who organized to do what? To discredit the grandest people God's sun ever shone on."

He quoted a lyric he said he had often heard colored folk sing in the cotton fields:

"I hardly needs to tell you how often I come across
"A fifty-dollar saddle on a five-dollar horse."

His voice dripped irony as he mimicked critics of Southern Democratic votes—"Southern Senators, the black sheep of this body, men who have come here by virtue of votes but have no business here, who are utterly despised by those who they have been instrumental in putting in office."

He told the Senate he liked Guffey "personally somehow or other, but I do not like his politics." But his speech exuded bitterness toward the President and the New Deal.

Saying he has been here "with five Presidents," the Senator declared, "I enjoyed being a Senator until this miserable thing came along—I mean this miserable party."

At another point he told the Senate: "I have but one platform that I shall live and die on, my loyalty to the Constitution, my loyalty to States' rights, and my loyalty to white supremacy."

Nye's Operation Delayed

By the Associated Press

A minor operation scheduled for yesterday on Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, has been postponed at least temporarily, his aides announced. Nye entered Naval Hospital Wednesday preparatory to removal of a cyst on the base of his spine.

Soldier Recovering After Removal of Metal From Heart

Algiers, Dec. 9 (AP).—A shell fragment, roughly shaped like a half-inch cube, hit an American private in Italy recently, entering the soldier's left side, hurtling forward and upward through the diaphragm and one lobe of the liver and finally lodging in his heart, but today that soldier is alive and on the road to recovery.

The Army surgeons who treated him were Lieut. Col. Carl S. Sanderson, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Capt. Lyman Brewer, Los Angeles, and the operations they performed are considered among the most difficult and successful so far achieved in the Italian theater.

First they mended the patient's side, diaphragm and liver; then they gave him a chance to rest, and sometime later removed the fragment in a delicate operation on his heart.

CIO Names '44 Campaigners

The CIO political action committee, under chairmanship of Sidney Hillman, completed organization yesterday for its campaign to get out the labor vote in the 1944 election.

Hillman announced at a press conference the appointment of John Abt, counsel to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, and Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, as counsel to the committee.

Hillman deplored the Senate's killing of a proposal for a Federal war ballot to be sent to service personnel.

"I predict it will not stand," he said in a statement. "The people of this Nation, nearly everyone with a blood relative at or going to the battlefronts, will demand reversal of the Senate decision.

"The 10 or 11 million men and women in the armed services, the merchant marine and thousands of civilians abroad on vital war work will demand reversal. Over one million CIO members in good standing who are today in the armed services will demand reversal.

"The issue cannot be dodged. Nothing that can be written into a political platform in 1944 can cover the stain that this open conspiracy against democracy has put upon both the Republican and Democratic Parties."

Appointments of regional directors of the political action committee included Irving Abramson, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland region.

Hostile Students Encamped

Stockholm, Dec. 9 (AP).—Several hundred Norwegian students, arrested by Nazi occupation authorities November 30 on charges of anti-German activity, sailed for Larvik, Norway, last night en route to German concentration camps, a Nazi-censored dispatch from Oslo said today. About 1200 students and 20 professors were held originally for deportation.

Senate Group Further Cuts Tax Measure

Among these is a progressively increasing tax on whisky held in bonded warehouses longer than four years. Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia, is backing it, believing it will not only bring in extra revenue immediately but will force some liquor out into the depleted market.

With corporate and individual levies yet to be considered, in addition to a sweeping set of amendments relating to the renegotiation of war contracts, members generally believed it would be impossible to complete the bill this week.

Rayburn Gives Plea for Unity

around the peace table and taking care of ourselves. I brand such talk a canard."

Rayburn castigated those who charge that Russia is setting out to communize the world.

"'Will Russia's strange doctrine find fertility in American soil?' they ask," the speaker continued. "'Is some insidious group trying to change our form of government?'

"So long as this House is elected every two years and Senators are elected every six years and the President is elected every four years, the American form of government is not going to be changed unless the American people want to change it."

Rayburn swung into the Patton case.

"The Army has not escaped whispering," he said, "especially since the Patton affair. That was a tragically unfortunate incident.

"Everybody knows mistakes have been made. We were attacked and we were unprepared. Quick decisions were needed.

"'If the Army and Navy cannot run this war better than any civilian then we should have done away with West Point and Annapolis long ago."

Two on Raft Saved As Two Porpoises Battle Six Whales

New Orleans, Dec. 9 (AP).—Two members of the Navy's Armed Guard today credited two friendly, fighting porpoises with probably saving their lives while they were adrift for 44 days last July and August.

The men, Seamen First Class Edgar A. Welhe of Louisville, Ky., and Lonnie Whitis, Eubank, Ky., were members of the Navy gun crew aboard a merchantman torpedoed in the Indian Ocean.

The two managed to get aboard a large life raft which was well provisioned, they said. On the twenty-eighth day a herd of six whales sighted the raft.

"They formed a line and came rushing at us," Welhe said. "They all sprayed water over us and the waves they raised rocked the raft so much we could hardly hold on."

Two porpoises appeared about that time, the survivors said, and engaged the whales in fierce combat before driving them off.

Commissioners Urge Fewer Accidents in D. C.

The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation calling attention to the "shameful squandering" of men, materials and time because of accidents and directed the city to join the National Safety Council in a campaign to reduce accidents over the holiday period.

Ther public was asked to accept personal responsibility for preventing accidents, which not only cause tragedy and suffering, but were also a major cause of slowing down the war effort. It was pointed out in the proclamation that deaths from accidents on the home front since Pearl Harbor were 3½ times as large as the toll taken on the fighting fronts.

then, of course, the spindly old gentleman with the star-spangled pants extracted a healthy tax cut out of what Sinatra had left.

Little by little, Dorsey and his manager were deftly urged to sell out their stake in the young mooer. Finally, they succumbed. Their price was $65,000. Sinatra put up $35,000 and the Music Corp. of America put up the other $30,000—in exchange for which it gained Sinatra's promise that it could represent him exclusively, for 10 per cent, at the expiration of the General Amusement Co.'s contract.

So now, with a long civilian life ahead of him, Sinatra owns 90 per cent of himself. In theater appearances he now works for a weekly guarantee of $15,000, or 50 per cent of the gross.

Sinatra, who wanted to be a boxer, naturally invoked the 50 per cent clause last week and received $30,002.50 for his week's mooing.

His new radio contract—fortunately it is not television, for he is sponsoring a vitamin pill—will call for $12,500 a week on the side. His movie contract calls for so much money that we cannot print the sum, what with ciphers being rationed.

Sinatra's million-dollar income for 1944 will gladden the Bureau of Internal Revenue to the tune of about $880,000. The girls of the land would have indeed wept if their groaner had been tossed into the anonymity of the Army.

But their grief would have been no more touching than that of Mr. Morgenthau. Mr. Morgenthau, no crooner-fancier he, will not care if Sinatra further perforates himself from head to foot—so long as he keeps singing. In civilian clothes.

It was understood that Sutherland will establish a close liaison between Mountbatten's southeast Asia command and MacArthur's southwest Pacific, including a constant exchange of officers. Actions in both theaters will be coordinated.

Senate Ignores Warnings; Votes Rail Pay Rise, 74 to 4

flation does come, we will not be able to escape the responsibility."

Senator Truman and Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado flatly denying the Vinson thesis, gave supporters of the resolution their answer to the Bailey argument. Johnson contended the increase was sanctioned by "gross inequities" provisions of the stabilization law. And Truman told the Senate the President twice had approved the 8-cent increase before it was set aside by Vinson.

Recommended by Board

"It seems to me that settles the question of responsibility," said Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat) of Missouri.

The 8-cent-an-hour increase originally was recommended by a presidential emergency board on May 24, and on August 7 it became the basis of an agreement between railway labor and management. Vinson set aside this finding and indorsed instead recommendations of a second emergency board for sliding scale increases ranging from 4 cents an hour for top paid employes to 10 cents an hour for the lower paid groups.

The sliding scale would cost the railroads only 18 million do" .s less than the flat 8 cents, leading proponents of the increase to argue that if one plan violates the "Little Steel" formula, the Vinson plan was a violation as well.

The Truman resolution was sped to the House, where the Interstate Commerce Committee is expected to approve it. It declares the August 7 agreement on an 8-cent increase "in accord with the requirements of the Railway Labor Act and all other requirements of law, and shall be held so to be, anything in the law or laws of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding."

Senator Truman recently introduced an amendment specifically annulling Vinson's orders overruling the increase, but did not press it yesterday. One effect of the amendment would have been to cover 100 per cent of the nonoperating rail workers. The resolution passed affects only about 95 per cent.

U. S. to Get 3.5 Hides To 1 for Britain

By the Associated Press

Agreements just concluded with Great Britain divide leather supplies available to the two nations on the basis of 3.5 hides to the United States and 1 to the United Kingdom, the Combined Raw Materials Board reported yesterday.

William L. Batt, member of the board, said that a United States mission on footwear, leather and hides had just returned after two-month consultations in Britain.

and rationing regulations violators might be compelled to violate internal revenue regulations to conceal their price and rationing violations. For instance, the Treasury requirement that wholesalers keep meticulous records of all transactions, if enforced strictly, would work to prevent price-ceiling violations.

Information on price violations uncovered by "revenooers" is being turned over to the OPA for action, ti was disclosed.

Meanwhile a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee prepared to open hearings today on the liquor situation, with Berkshire scheduled to be one of the first witnesses.

Imports of gin from Cuba and Mexico are closely scrutinized, Berkshire said, because "it has been found that many such shipments contain little or no juniper flavoring, the essential flavoring material for gin under the standards of identity, and that in many instances the product was made from inferior spirits."

Similarly some imported "whiskies" have been found to be cane spirits and flavoring, "often bearing little resemblance to whisky."

The Bureau of Customs has been asked to withhold release of imported gin products until samples can be analyzed and the alcohol tax unit is withholding action on whisky label applications pending examination of samples.

"The unit will enforce the labeling regulations stringently on these imports," Berkshire said, "as the quality of much of the product examined is so inferior as to cause adverse consumer reaction.

A total of 507 illicit stills were seized in a four weeks' period, an increase of 46 per cent over the same four weeks' period last year—when moonshining was at its lowest since the repeal of prohibition.

"Sugar rationing and other war factors have helped to keep illicit distilling at extremely low levels, despite the high level of Federal taxes and the shortages of taxpaid liquor," the Treasury said.

Considerable quantities of adulterated and mislabeled liquor have been seized in recent weeks in New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey in connection with "cutting and bottling operations, with some cases also involving counterfeit revenue stamps and labels," the Treasury added.

responsibility to disseminate all news which does not violate national security."

Asked to specify what "volunteer" censors were meant, the Office of Censorship said last night that Price would hold a press conference this morning.

While the Navy Department had no immediate comment, the War Department expressed agreement with the statement by Price, and said that the department, as a matter of policy, acted on the idea that if for any reason it wanted a story withheld from publication, the request should be made to the Office of Censorship, which in turn could transmit a request to newspapers.

In some instances, it was said, local commanding or public relations officers had requested a local ban on publication. Usually this was done to give the officers time to investigate the situation, and in circumstances which made it difficult or impossible to consult officials in Washington, who could then have made the request to the Office of Censorship. Such local requests, however, have the weight only of requests, although at times the phrasing may have been that of an order, the spokesman said.

OPA Reverses Rule On Cottage Cheese

Reversing a recent order at the request of the War Food Administration, the Office of Price Administration yesterday announced that ration stamps will be required for cottage cheese only when the cheese contains more than 5 per cent butterfat.

In effect, this removes nearly all cottage cheese from rationing.

Infant and Child in the Culture of Today
. . . by Arnold Gesell, M. D.

"A person among persons in a world of persons." With aliveness of style, the author presents—in a practical way—the growth characteristics of the pre-school child and outlines specific techniques of development, step by step.

Totalitarian "Kultur" completely subordinates the family. But the family is basic in modern democratic culture. "Infant and Child in the Culture of Today" was written to give dignity to the individuality of the person because an attempt to destroy this seems to be one of the deep-rooted causes of this war.

Dr. Gesell is a foremost authority on child guidance and psychological care and is well known for "The First Five Years of Life."

An ideal gift book for parents, teachers, and others who want a practical guide to the developing of children's innate abilities $4

NAM Adopts 'Better U. S.' Platform

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—The National Association of Manufacturers adopted late today a six-point platform embodying the principles laid down in speeches of its leaders as requirements for a "better America" in the postward period.

The NAM resolutions committee, headed by John Holmes, president of Swift & Co. of Chicago, presented to the annual meeting these six points:

"Work together, make government one of laws and not of men, develop new frontiers, reward accomplishment, restore constitutional government, and establish and maintain peace."

Employment Aids

Regarding the transition from war to peace, the platform said:

"Employment in industry will be speeded up if wartime controls are ended as soon as practicable after hostilities cease, if wartime taxes are then reduced, and if the Government pays its debts promptly when it cancels contracts.

"Employment will also be increased if Government makes clear that it will not operate plants in competition with private industry and that surplus war goods will not be dumped on the market."

The resolution coincided with earlier declarations of NAM leaders.

Frederick C. Crawford, president of the association, told 4000 industrialists attending the NAM's 48th annual conference these five objectives were the foundation of the program:

"1. The highest attainable standard of living.

"2. The fullest degree of economic security.

"3. The maximum opportunity for productive and remunerative employment.

"4. The most impartial economic justice.

Refers to Stalin's Praise

Crawford, president of Thompson Products, Inc., of Cleveland, said freedom of enterprise was an essential part of the postwar program and added:

"We know perfectly well that America is not going to be run for the benefit of business. We intend to run business for the benefit of America."

In his aggressive demand for "courageous, hopeful, optimistic, dynamic leadership," Crawford declared:

"The Russians, I know, say, 'Why do you waste time talking about social reforms and the like; you know the real key—greater production'."

Crawford repeated the recent toast given by Premier Stalin in praise of American war production at the three-power conference in Teheran.

Senate Asks Information On War Assets

By the Associated Press

The Senate passed yesterday and sent to the House a resolution dealing with eventual disposition of upwards of 75 billion dollars of war materials, machinery and factories.

Sponsored by Senator Murray (Democrat) of Montana, the resolution calls upon President Roosevelt to direct Federal agencies to provide within three months the first of a series of studies of:

1. The types, quantities, cost, location and custody of war materials, real estate and other property owned or controlled by the Government which, now or later, won't be needed for war purposes.

2. The adequacy of current records and inventory controls to keep Congress and the Executive informed.

3. Modifications that may be necessary to make such information readily available.

The Senate acted on a recommendation of its military committee which warned that Congress is faced with establishing a national policy "on how this tremendous amount of Government property is to be used."

"At the present moment," the committee reported, "the inventory control methods of the various war agencies are inadequate to give a full, current picture of the types and amounts of Government property, let alone surplus property."

"The notice said that," Podolak admitted, "but it didn't say what year."

He was held to the grand jury under $1500 bond.

Great Tests Still to Come, Stimson Says

By the Associated Press

The progress achieved in two years of war gives the Nation "every reason for encouragement and hope," Secretary of War Stimson said yesterday, but he warned that "the great decisive tests" are yet to come.

He told a news conference:

"Not until the continent of Europe is invaded, and we have met face to face the remaining masses of the German troops—not until our Navy has grappled with the powerful home fleet of the Japanese, can we say that we are passing through the period of drag of this war and approaching its finish."

"Period of the Drag"

Stimson explained the "period of the drag" was a reference to a summary of the war's outlook that he had presented to a news conference just after Pearl Harbor. He then had divided the war into three phases—the onset, the drag, and the finish—commenting that in the first it was inevitable that the free governments should be at a disadvantage, but that during the two succeeding periods, "when it becomes the contest of endurance, the democracies win their victories and win the war."

Yesterday Stimson reviewed the progress to date, pointing out that the first year was devoted to defensive operations and trying to halt advances of the enemy. Then, he said, we opened the second year with "a very daring and very lucky attack and landing on the coasts of North Africa" and succeeded, with the British, in wresting initiative from the Axis powers of Europe.

Yet to Meet Main Forces

But he emphasized that the fighting to date was of a "perimeter nature," that neither in Europe nor the Pacific have our ground forces met the main masses of enemy troops. At this point he paid tribute to Russia as "the only one of the Allies which has encountered the main force of Germany."

"In the light of this brief summary," the War Secretary said, "I do not think that we Americans can say that our military forces have more than entered upon the second period of the war, the period of drag, when the weight of combat and of losses bears heavily on the forces engaged."

On the home front, Stimson added, "We cannot say that we have even reached the period of the drag or its danger to our morale."

Continued Cooperation Asked in Rabies Crisis

Although no cases of rabid dogs have come to the attention of the Health Department since November 22, Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday warned that this was no time for citizens to be lax in efforts to keep dogs off the streets and in having pets examined which act suspiciously.

If the current epidemic which caused the death of one person and resulted in treatment of more than 90 bitten by rabid animals is to be beaten, Dr. Ruhland said the wholehearted and sincere cooperation of the public is necessary.

House Action On Veterans' Pay Delayed

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Hopes that the House will act this week on mustering-out pay for veterans of World War II were dimmed last night after the House Military Affairs Committee failed to take final action on the matter and scheduled further hearings for today.

Army and Navy representatives told the committee they favor the proposed flat $300 payment to veterans, except that a smaller amount would be paid those who have served less than 90 days.

Meanwhile, Senators Warren Austin of Vermont and Styles Bridges of New Hampshire (Republicans) introduced in the Senate a bill which would provide mustering-out pay for servicemen ranging from $200 to $500, to be paid in three installments, and the War Department announced it had prepared a greatly simplified "report of separation" for discharged soldiers which replaces seven forms and five letters hitherto required.

At the same time, the Maritime Commission gave an indication as to where discharged veterans are turning in a report that "hundreds" of former fighting men have taken jobs in merchant shipyards.

Appearing before the House committee yesterday was Brig. Gen. William F. Tompkins of the Army general staff, who urged quick action on the mustering-out measure as a morale builder for overseas troops.

"It will give notice to our armed forces, as the President stated in his recent message to the Congress, that the people back home do not propose to let them down," Tompkins said.

He opposed putting veterans on furlough and continuing their pay in lieu of a mustering-out gratuity, he said, because "I believe most men will want to get out of the service."

Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, said he did not know whether the committee would vote out a bill today because several Congressmen had asked to be heard. He promised, however, that a bill would be reported out before next Tuesday.

300 U-Boats Probably Sunk By Allied Craft in 9 Months

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—U-boat hunting Allied ships and planes probably destroyed upwards of 300 undersea raiders in the Atlantic from March to November, seriously crippling the submarine fleet which has been one of Hitler's main hopes for checkmating an invasion of Europe.

An announcement tonight by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill said that once again, in November, the number of U-Boats sunk exceeded the number of their victims, even though increased caution by the Nazis presented the Allied subkillers with fewer targets.

The exact number of German submarines known sunk during November was not announced, but it was disclosed officially at the end of October that 150 U-boats had been smashed in the six months beginning in May, when the tide began shifting strongly toward the powerful team of United States and Britain.

In the peak period of May and June, and again in August and September, U-boats were sunk at the rate of one a day.

It is well known that official reports along this line are exceedingly cautious. All in all, it may be that 300 would be a conservative calculation for the nine-month period. It would not seem impossibly high to suggest that the toll might have reached 350, even 400.

(A Washington statement said tonight the use of bases in the Azores, permitted under an old Portugal-Britain pact, contributed largely to last month's success in the antisubmarine war.)

The Allies' losses caused by submarines for March never have been disclosed officially, but it would be safe to guess that such sinkings had to be counted by the scores, for Admiral Karl Doenitz, supreme commander of the German navy, was able to keep about 200 undersea craft operating at all times. This, on the generally accepted ratio of one-third in action, one-third in ports and the remainder in transit.

It is presumed that the Germans h[illegible] co.struct some 150 new submarines. But this has not restored the force to its normal strength because of the withdrawal of large numbers for refitting, to meet the challenge of enlarged Allied surface and air cover and new offensive devices.

With all these setbacks, it is doubted whether Doenitz now can keep as many U-boats as previously at battle positions on a regular basis. These, too, must be run by increasingly inexperienced crews.

In addition, the U-boat has been eased from the Nazi propaganda stream—in favor of "secret weapons," it appears. It has been reported reliably that German submarine construction has been deprived of its former priority rating.

Benes in Russia To Sign Pact on Postwar Question

London (Friday) Dec. 10 (AP).—Edouard Benes, President of the Czechoslovak provisional government has arrived in Russia, Czech circles said tonight.

Benes is expected to sign a pact which will have important repercussions on the postwar central European set-up. It will open a door to Poland to join in the barricade against Germany's traditional urge to "drive to the east" and will amount to a disclaimer of Soviet intentions to Bolshevize smaller European countries, it was understood here.

The pact, negotiations for which were recently concluded in London, is not expected to include territorial boundaries.

Laskey Warns Storekeepers

Fifty women's wear stores were represented yesterday at a meeting called by John L. Laskey, District OPA enforcement attorney, who told them what proprietors might expect if further ceiling price violations were reported.

Laskey said criminal offences under OPA regulations carried penalties as high as $5000 fines, one year in jail or both. Maximum penalty for civil offenses is revocation of the right to engage in business. Significantly, he added, the recent survey by OPA investigators in the District had disclosed violations in the women's wear trade.

Following Laskey's talk V. A. Holmes, price specialist of the OPA, showed the merchants how to use their pricing charts in arriving at a legal ceiling figure. He also went into details as what is required under the rgeulations concerning the principal of the percentage price markup.

More Bonds Cashed In, But Sales Mount

There is a growing tendency for the public to cash in war bonds, but it doesn't begin to compare with the tendency to buy them, the Office of War Information reported last night.

OWI revealed that the public cashed in its war bonds in September at a rate more than 5½ times as great as in September a year ago. Redemptions totaled $148,500,000, compared with $25,900,000 in September, 1942.

On the other side of the ledger, however, were September war bond sales totaling $1,927,000,000 or almost 13 times the amount of the redemptions.

Nineteen Billion to Spend

The report, third in a monthly series dealing with the Nation's economy, said that inflationary pressures had increased in October, especially with a record $19,250,000,000 jingling in the public's pocket.

This peak in money in circulation represents an increase of 410 million dollars over September, the previous high month.

The estimate of 1943 income to individuals stayed at 142 billion dollars, with the value of available goods and services lagging far behind at $90,600,000,000.

After taxes are deducted from income, there remains 35 billion dollars, OWI said, which cannot be spent for goods or services and which tends to push up prices.

"Much of this money may have been placed in war bonds, life insurance and other forms of savings, but the all-time high for money in circulation and other continuing pressures were interpreted by responsible Government officials as highly dangerous to the price level," OWI said.

Other Economic Factors

These other factors bearing on the Nation's economy were listed in the report:

Corporate profits, after taxes, first nine months of 1943, $5,900,000,000, up 600 billion dollars from first nine months of 1942.

Money in checking accounts on November 1, in banks reporting to the Federal Reserve, $31,800,000,000, compared with $28,800,000,000 the previous year.

Personal taxes, 16 billion dollars, compared with seven billion dollars in 1942.

Savings deposits on July 1, $30,300,000,000, an increase of three billion dollars from July 1, 1942.

Life insurance premiums collected in September, $281,100,000 compared with $253,700,000 in September, 1942.

"In the past two months the cost-of-living index has gone up," OWI said. "The rise was slight, but it stands as a warning. There are constant and increasing pressures for higher prices. The price line can be held only with the full support of every citizen."

Catholics Relax Rules on Fasting In Food Difficulty

Relaxing of the rules on fasting and abstinence for Catholics of this jurisdiction has been announced by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and Washington Archdioceses.

In an announcement in the Baltimore Catholic Review, the archbishop said, in part:

"In view of the increasing difficulties in obtaining a normal variety of foods and of the fact that so many of our people are now required to work longer hours, all Catholics of this jurisdiction are hereby dispensed from the law, both of fast and abstinence, on all days of the year with the exception of the Fridays, the Eve of Christmas and Ash Wednesday."

Union Backs Subsidies

Support of the subsidies to halt rising prices was given yesterday by the Washington Central Labor Union, which voted to petition the Senate to disapprove the House bill denying subsidies.

The Meaning of Teheran . . .

Something happened in Washington that made possible the success of the conferences in Moscow and in Teheran.

That something was a shift in American viewpoint. Practical settlements now take precedence over plans for world perfection. The Atlantic Charter and the Four Freedoms remain fine ideals . . . but they are being soft-pedalled in the interests of "realism." To work in postwar harmony with Britain and Russia we have postponed some lofty hopes.) Stalin is to have the determining voice in the Baltics and Eastern Poland. England will have the final say on the fate of British colonies. The Four Freedoms must be achieved by each nation, rather than guaranteed by America.

This is part of the significant story told by Kingsbury Smith, veteran correspondent covering the State Department, who has called his shots before with amazing accuracy. His article, "Our Foreign Policy Goes Realist," in the December Mercury, tells what happened inside our State Department to pave the way for Moscow and to make possible the successful meeting with Stalin at Teheran . . . It is sure to arouse important and salutary debate on a great public question.

Eric Johnston says:

"I was really amazed that The Mercury with a relatively small circulation could exert such a deep and widespread influence . . ."

Before his election as president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Johnston was well known to business men of the Northwest, little known nationally. The first article he wrote was for The Mercury, "Business Faces a Changing World." It revealed an unorthodox, courageous personality with challenging convictions. It was picked up by the press, quoted by the radio, received wide editorial comment. The Saturday Evening Post told the country what sort of man Eric Johnston was. The Reader's Digest published more of his views. He became the most sought-after speaker in the country. And in a matter of months, American business knew it had found a new spokesman of major stature; and Americans recognized a dynamic new liberal leader in the national line-up.

For two decades The Mercury has served as an incubator of ideas, a sounding board for people with something worthwhile to say, an organ of significant opinion. And in two decades The Mercury has acquired a reputation as a magazine that makes things happen, and an audience important enough to make its opinions public opinion.

Great U.S. Planes Carrying More Bombs, Guns

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—America's deadly Flying Fortresses swinging into the final aerial assault on Germany's European stronghold now pack a one-third greater weight of bombs and 20 per cent more firepower, the Eighth U. S. Air Force disclosed today.

The American air dreadnoughts also may team up with the RAF in smashing night blows on continental targets, it was believed here.

The same announcement heralded a 10 per cent firepower increase in a new Liberator, America's other type of heavy bomber, with the addition of two more power turrets in the nose and belly bristling with new 50-caliber guns.

Gunners aboard Fortresses and Liberators destroyed 195 enemy planes in November and may be expected to increase their kill with their new armament.

Heavier Bomb Load

The heavier bomb load for the Fortresses is made possible by a pair of wing racks capable of gripping another 2,000 pounds of explosives, raising the average load from three tons to four and permitting the bomb bay to carry a greater number of destructive incendiaries, which are light but take up space.

Range and speed of the Fortresses necessarily are cut with the greater bomb load, but the external 150-pound steel racks which can be bolted across the wings between the engines in a half hour, make the planes a much more potent weapon for shorter preinvasion attacks.

The bombs in the new racks can be released electrically or manually, and in sequence or salvo.

This bomb load increased also suggests the possibility that the Fortresses may join the RAF in mass night saturation raids where sacrifices of speed and ammunition load could be made. The German radio recently has referred to night raids by "British-American bombers," but there has been no official statement here to support the Berlin assertions.

More Guns for Forts

The new (B-17G) Fortress guns will be increased from 10 to 12, but they will be in a "chin turret" providing improved sights and greater angles of fire from the nose.

"The chin turret gives the Fortress four pairs of 50 caliber machineguns in the chin, upper and ball turrets and the tail," the statement said. "In addition the Fortress has single mounted guns in the nose, waist and near the radio operator."

The electrically-driven chin turret operated by the bombardier under the nose of the ship is fed by ammunition rollers. Empty cartridge case and links are thrown clear of the ship.

New Turret in Nose

The newest (B-24H) Liberator has a new power turret in the nose and a retractable ball turret amidships, bringing the average number of guns from 9 to 10 with the attendant advantages of turret fire.

"Added to the tail turret and upper turret, these modifications give the Liberator four power turrets," it was announced. "In the nose turret the gunner is protected by ½-inch metal armor and 2½-inch bullet-proof glass. The armor and glass are mounted on tracks which move with the gun."

Another new offensive development disclosed is that bomb-carrying P-47 Thunderbolt fighter pilots now employ modified dive-bombing tactics similar to those of British Typhoon airmen, who roar down from great heights over Axis targets, releasing their explosives from medium bombing level and making a scorching getaway.

Chinese Wrest Changteh from Jap Invaders

By Spencer Moosa

Chungking, Dec. 9 (AP).—Chinese forces under Gen. Yu Cheng-wan, the "hero of Changteh," recaptured that stricken city in particularly bloody fighting early this morning and moved on to push the Japanese invaders back from China's "rice bowl" region.

A special communique from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters announced Gen. Yu's victory in returning to avenge his 57th Division. The division was wiped out except for 300 men in its 15-day defense of the city that fell to the Japanese December 3.

A supplementary communique, giving details of the action, said that Changteh's internal and external defenses were found in ruins by the Chinese, who wasted no time in following up their victory.

Chinese forces north of the Yuan River in the Panchiapu sector, northwest of Changteh, were attacking the Japanese who are already showing "signs of weakening," said the bulletin.

Last night a pitched battle was fought on the south shore of the Yuan River, and the Chinese succeeded in crossing after inflicting heavy casualties on the Japanese.

Changteh, the gateway to Changsha and inmoptant link in the Hunan-Szechwan supply line, fell shortly thereafter to the Chinese who streamed into the city by the east and west gates at 4 a. m., the high command said.

U. S. air power in China cooperated with ground forces throughout the entire action, attacking communications and troop concentrations, bombing military objectives and dropping supplies to the Chinese forces.

The recapture of Changteh effectively dimmed for the time being at least any Japanese prospects for a move on Changsha, objective of four major offensives.

Federal Bar Association To Hear Admiral

Military and naval law will be discussed by Rear Admiral Thomas Leigh Gatch, Judge Advocate of the Navy, when he speaks Tuesday at 8 p. m. before the committee on military and naval law of the Federal Bar Association and the American Bar Association at the Army and Navy Club, 17th and I sts. nw.

Admiral Gatch has held his present post since September. He was appointed following his convalescence from wounds received at Guadalcanal. He also saw action in the battle of Santa Cruz as a result of which he received the Purple Heart and two Navy Crosses.

Germany Admits Invasion Is Near

London, Dec. 9 (INS).—Germany admitted tonight that the Allies are ready to invade continental Europe from the west.

The Nazi military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, discussing the tripower conference in Heheran, declared that "it can be assumed that the forces required for invasion are ready."

He estimated that more than 50 Allied divisions are concentrated in Britain.

War Sidelights

Sforza's Life Threatened In Letters

Naples, Dec. 9 (AP).—Allied military authorities and Italian police began investigating today a series of letters threatening the life of Count Carlo Sforza, anti-Fascist leader who has urged the abdication of King Vittorio Emanuele. The letters apparently were written by supporters of the monarchy.

Spain Apologizes

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—The British government has received an apology from the Spanish government for insults to the British vice consul and members of his family at the hands of uniformed Spanish Falangists at Zaragoza on November 19, it was learned today.

Gen. Francisco Gomez Jordana, Spanish foreign minister, has conveyed his government's apology to Sir Samuel Hoare, British ambassador, with assurances the guilty Falangists would be punished.

'Ike's' Popularity Soars

Naples, Dec. 9 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's popularity has skyrocketed throughout the Fifth Army as a result of one of his recent pronouncements on the potentiality of drawing a poker hand composed of three kings and a pair of jacks.

A soldier who heard that the commander in chief has a hobby of mathematically computing odds on poker hands asked him about that particular full house.

Eisenhower replied he hadn't actually solved the problem, but would guess the odds against it would be 1,082,900 to 1.

Since then doughboys throughout Italy have been doing heavy pencil and paper work. Scores wrote to the Stars and Stripes declaring "Ike" almost hit it on the nose with his estimate.

N. C. Naval Officer Is Killed While Welding in Water

The Potomac River Naval Command announced yesterday the death of Lieut. William Claudius Bowen, 29, of Smithfield, N. C., who was accidentally electrocuted Wednesday when he was practicing welding under water.

Lieutenant Bowen was a student at the Deep Sea Diving School and had entered the huge tank filled with water where he was being taught underwater welding by the electric arc method.

Officials at the Navy Yard said he was hauled to the surface as soon as it was known that something had gone wrong but that he did not respond to the resuscitation efforts of physicians.

Lieutenant Bowen is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emily Elizabeth Bowen of Smithfield. His body will be shipped there for burial.

Feeling High In Village as Mosleys Arrive

Shipton-Under-Wychwood, Oxfordshire, England, Dec. 9 (AP).—Feeling was running high tonight in this little village where Sir Oswald Mosley, prewar British Fascist leader, and Lady Mosely have taken over exclusive living quarters in a fifteenth century inn in the heart of the Cotswold Hills.

Little groups of townspeople gathered in the general store and postoffice and spoke out bitterly against the presence of the Mosleys, who slipped into their new home before dawn yesterday. Their recent release from internment caused nation-wide protests, particularly by labor organizations.

Condemnation here seemed general, although there were no signs of violence or that any real effort would be made to force him and Lady Mosley to move on. They arrived by automobile with a police escort and several plainclothes officers are keeping them under surveillance.

The Mosleys have seven rooms in the Shaven Crown Inn, which was closed about a year ago because of a lack of servants.

Shipton is 70 miles northwest of London and about 20 miles from Oxford.

Lady Redesdale, sister of Lady Mosley, visited the couple this afternoon and it is possible that their two children, who have been living with friends, may join them later.

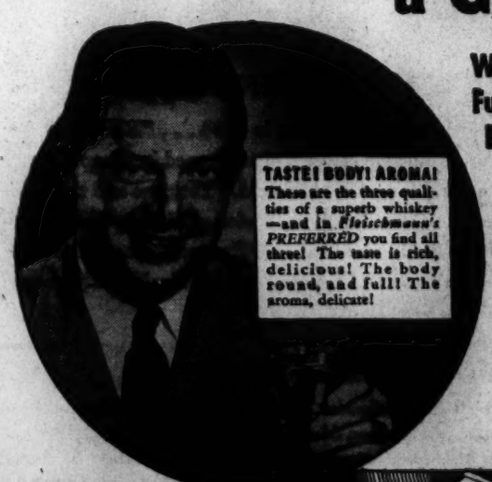
Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!
Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!


TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!
● This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey ... who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.
We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.
The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ½ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!
FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

The TRUTH about the Whiskey Shortage

Is there really a shortage?

IT IS APPARENT that there is great confusion on the subject of the present whiskey supply. Surely the public is entitled to the facts no matter how discouraging they may be. Following are frank answers to some of the most pertinent questions:

1. Is there really a whiskey shortage in this country?

Yes—a serious shortage . . . because not a drop of whiskey has been distilled since October 8, 1942. The distilling facilities of the entire industry are engaged night and day in producing nothing but alcohol for war purposes.

2. How much whiskey is there actually in storage?

Approximately 303,000,000 gallons.

While the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Treasury Department, as of October 31, 1943, reported an inventory of 399,023,881 gallons, ORIGINALLY put in barrels, 96,000,000 gallons have actually disappeared through soakage and evaporation which leaves a net of about 303,000,000 gallons. This evaporation is recognized by the Government approved table of allowances.

There is no mystery about the amount of whiskey withdrawn from or in storage in Government bonded warehouses. The Alcohol Tax Unit publishes these figures monthly.

3. Is a comparison between whiskey stocks and whiskey withdrawals a true indication of how long the available supply will last?

No. It is an accepted practice to blend grain neutral spirits with straight whiskey. Normally, as a result of this blending, the total amount of whiskies available to the public is increased. Today, however, the supply of grain neutral spirits is only a small fraction of that of straight whiskies and soon the supply will be exhausted, making it necessary to withdraw more straight whiskey to replace the grain neutral spirits formerly used.

4. Can all of this 303 million gallons be sold now?

No. Prior to the war, the distilling industry carried a normal inventory in bonded warehouses of over 500 million gallons which was necessary to maintain reasonable standards of quality. To avoid repetition of conditions which existed in 1934, following repeal of prohibition, when young and immature whiskey was offered to the public, it is essential to the public interest that some reserve be maintained for post-war requirements. Otherwise, there will be a bone-dry period following the war, or the public will be compelled to drink green, unpalatable whiskey. Since the entire whiskey stocks now available are already dangerously lower than normal inventory needs, the reserving of not less than 100 million gallons is imperative, even though entirely inadequate.

5. How much, therefore, is really available until production is resumed?

About 203,000,000 proof gallons.

And it must be made clear that the only reason there is any legal whiskey at all, is because whiskey must be aged before it is suitable for consumption. It cannot be made today and sold tomorrow like most other products. If it could, the country would have been bone-dry months ago because there would have been no reason for a stock. Never was the old adage more applicable —"you can't have your cake and eat it, too".

6. How long would this supply last at the present unprecedented rate of demand aggravated by public hoarding, speculation and black market operations?

Certainly less than a year.

All present statements to the effect that there is "plenty of whiskey for five years" are completely false. Here's what would happen if, tomorrow morning each individual distiller abandoned his self-imposed rationing plan and simply accepted all orders. Provided they could get enough bottles, corks, cartons and sufficient labor, the entire supply would move out about as fast as it could be packaged . . . certainly in LESS THAN A YEAR. And surely no one could possibly regard this as a service to the public, the Government or the industry.

How much whiskey is available?

7. What has been done to make the available supply last?

For almost a year each distiller has been following a self-imposed rationing program. Even so, it is estimated they are now bottling and releasing at the annual rate of from 90 to 100 million gallons of whiskies, compared with an output of whiskey of 134,508,954 gallons in the Government fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, and 133,277,074 in the preceding fiscal year.

Though some localities felt the shortage before others, the shortage is now universal. The majority of distillers are distributing their products fairly and equitably to the various markets on the basis of previous purchase records, with due allowances for shifts in population.

8. Is it true that some of the lower priced brands have disappeared from the market?

Yes. Many rectifiers and small distillers who supplied a large part of the low priced brands have exhausted their limited stocks. In many cases, among the larger distillers, critical inventory positions made it necessary to curtail or eliminate some brands. Quite naturally, such distillers sought to protect the continuity of their most important brands and these were generally in the higher quality brackets. In whiskey, as in many other commodities, consumer demand for higher quality products has greatly increased.

9. What have distillers done to help maintain O.P.A. ceiling prices?

They have published ceiling prices in their advertisements and have admonished the public not to pay more. They have urged the trade to cooperate with the Government by maintaining ceiling prices. They have urged retailers to display signs reading: "O.P.A. ceiling prices . . . do not pay more!" They have prepared a series of newspaper advertisements warning the public not to buy at black market prices. They have urged the O.P.A. to call a conference in Washington of the State liquor administrators for the purpose of urging them to lend their support in the enforcement of the O.P.A. price regulations.

10. Have distillers raised their prices on whiskey?

O.P.A. regulations provide that distillers' prices shall not exceed those in effect during March 1942. However, the regulations do permit the addition of Federal Excise Taxes and the elimination of promotional discounts. Just as there are no one cent sales of scarce drug items today, nor special sales of canned goods, cigarettes and other commodities greatly in demand, there are, of course, no cut-rate sales of whiskey.

Wholesaler and retailer ceiling prices are also governed by O.P.A. regulations which provide fixed profit ceilings.

11. Have the distillers requested permission to resume the making of whiskey during the war?

The position of the industry has been that as long as the Government requires its entire distilling facilities for the production of war-alcohol, these facilities should be devoted 100% to that purpose. When the total facilities are no longer needed by the Government, the distillers feel that at least a partial resumption of the making of whiskey should be granted in order to alleviate the critical shortage and its resulting evils.

12. Is the shortage of whiskey and higher taxes bringing the bootlegger back?

Yes. The greater the incentive—the greater the temptation.

How long will the present supply last?

13. Is there a black market in whiskey?

There is undoubtedly a black market in whiskey as there is in other commodities where a shortage exists and where the consumer demand is great, such as nylon hose, butter, beef, gasoline, tires, etc. Only public cooperation, tighter regulation, more rigorous enforcement . . . or the resumption of whiskey production . . . can correct it.

14. Is it true that large distillers are trying to buy additional whiskey, when available?

Yes. Any large distiller who has his brands and trademarks to protect naturally will try to buy any acceptable whiskey which may be offered for sale. However, the purchase of whiskies by one company from another does not increase or decrease, by a single quart, the supply available to the consumer.

15. Are consumers hoarding whiskey?

Unquestionably, many consumers have bought beyond their immediate needs as they have done with other scarce products.

16. Has the trade been hoarding whiskey?

Wholesale stocks are lower than at any time in the last nine years. Retail stocks are much lower than normal. Some package stores do reserve favorite brands for their regular customers thereby avoiding sales to those who might be hoarders, speculators or black market operators.

17. Are the profits of the distilling industry larger than those of other American industries?

According to a report printed in the New York Journal of Commerce of January 15, 1943, the distilling industry ranked in 13th position among 16 major industries from the standpoint of percentage of profit to sales and likewise in the percentage of profit to invested capital.

18. Why is rum and gin more plentiful than whiskey?

Today rums and gins are imported, largely from the West Indies, Mexico and South America. The alcoholic base for these beverages is distilled from blackstrap molasses and the labels indicate that they are products made from cane and not from grain.

19. Why do distillers continue to advertise their products when retailers have such meager supplies?

The trademarks and trade names of a producer are among his most valuable assets. The distiller, like other producers, is trying to keep his brand names before the public so that they will not be forgotten.

CONCLUSIONS

1. There is an acute shortage of whiskey. If the present abnormal rate of demand were fully satisfied, the supply would be exhausted in less than a year.

2. Even under the present rationing programs of the individual distillers, conditions will become progressively more acute and aggravated because not a single drop of whiskey sold since October 8, 1942 is being replaced. The public must realize that its consumption of whiskey must be curtailed, as has its consumption of all other scarce commodities.

3. There can be no solution of the present shortage until beverage production is resumed.

4. Black markets and other violations resulting from the shortage of liquor are condemned by the responsible members of the industry just as severely as they are by enforcement officials.

We know of no other industry in America which is devoting its production facilities 100% to war work . . . is accounting for over 1 billion dollars in Federal and State taxes annually . . . and, at the same time, is filling some portion of the current demands of its customers. When you consider all these facts, isn't it fair to ask your understanding and cooperation under the present difficult conditions?

German Shellfire Still Wreaks Havoc in Leningrad

Moscow, Dec. 9 (AP).—Nikolai Tikhonov, Leningrad's leading journalist, in a graphic story in the army newspaper, Red Star, reminded his readers today that the northern metropolis, although no longer an active front, is still the object of enemy shellfire and that people die there almost daily as a result of the war.

"It's a quiet winter day," said Tikhonov's article. "The great city begins its usual day of work. A loaded street car is struck by a large shell. Instantly it becomes a mass of blood, steel and wood splinters and smashed human bodies.

"Bodies are thrown all over the snowy cobblestones. Blood makes many pools until it is blotted up by the white snow. Here is a young girl prostrate with wide-open dead eyes. An aged worker with his neck almost torn off.

"Shells explode on the roof of St. Isaac's Cathedral. Shells pierce the Dutch Church, one of the oldest buildings in Leningrad. Shells explode in the yard of the pioneer palace, in Leningrad's hospitals. On the Neva shells sink a barge loaded with wood."

"Dr. Kharchenko told me, 'I am an old doctor of Leningrad. During many months I have been cursing this barbaric shelling of the city. I've seen corpses of children and adults until I'm very tired.'"

Senate Leaders Try to Delay Subsidy Debate, but Committee Pushes Ahead

By Christine Sadler

Apparently still fearful of defeat on the subsidy issue, Administration leaders in the Senate yesterday made another effort to delay consideration of the antisubsidy bill until after January 1.

Spurning the proposal, voiced by Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, acting chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, worked overtime last night to complete testimony on the controversial measure.

If a compromise is worked out by the committee in executive sessions, beginning today, Senate action on the floor probably would not sustain the agreement, it was conceded yesterday, and there is no indication the House would recede from its powerful vote to discontinue food subsidies on December 31.

Labor Stand Condemned

Farm leaders ending the hearings condemned organized labor's position in the price control picture and charged it had waged an unremitting and unfair campaign to make consumers believe farmers are making exhorbitant profits and would welcome inflation.

"Labor has consistently opposed wage control while at the same time charging farmers with being against price control," W. R. Ogg of the American Farm Bureau Federation, declared. "While the truth is we have fought for both types of control and are still doing so. The record shows plainly that wages constitute the greatest single element in the cost of production today, that hourly wage rates are the greatest in history and that increases granted labor have been the weapon forcing prices up."

Representatives from a dozen women's organizations testified at the morning session, all except one in favor of subsidy continuance, and two disabled veterans of World War II—Ben Noble, a blinded marine, and David Harris, who was on Guadalcanal, declared they did not believe Congress should let the price line be broken.

Blinded Marine's Plea

Noble, who was accompanied by his wife and child, said his $135 monthly compensation was higher than that of most veterans but that he and his wife had exhausted their prewar savings to live. "I don't know anything about subsidies," he declared, "but I think there should be some governmental control over living costs."

Committee members kept asking the women witnesses about taxation, farm incomes, and inflationary spirals and interrupting to ask such questions as "Don't you think OPA could control prices without subsidies if it would tackle the profits made by middle men?"

Undaunted, the women refused to be sidetracked from their stand subsidies are a vital inflation control weapon. Mrs. William McPherson of the National Consumers League was interrupted by Senator Bankhead when she declared the Government is buying 50 per cent of the Nation's food. "I think your figures are too high and it's nearer 20 per cent," he said.

"Worth Talking About"

"Well, I think 20 per cent is worth talking about," Mrs. McPherson declared, "especially when what the Government buys is being paid for out of our taxes and the bill is going to be greater if subsidies are removed."

Mrs. Elizabeth Christian of the National Women's Trade Union League declared the increase in food prices brought on by the subsidy's removal would result in panic and lowered efficiency among the country's women warworkers.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, speaking for the League of Negro Women, declared an increase in food prices meant less food on the table and less milk for children of Negro families.

"It's not a question of them spending their savings or just paying more for the same thing. It's a question of having enough to eat," she declared.

Liquor Probe By 2 Agencies Under Way

Violators of OPA ceiling prices on liquor now face a double hazard in the form of action by local OPA boards and the Bureau of Internal Revenue, it was disclosed yesterday by John L. Laskey, District OPA enforcement attorney, and the revenue department.

Laskey, reluctant to give details of specific data, said the District OPA investigators had been working for several months gathering information, but, he added, none of the cases has yet got beyond the investigation stage. He characterized the work as "slow and difficult."

The alcohol tax unit of Internal Revenue, which has been working on the liquor black market cases, announced yesterday the inquiry is Nation-wide and has resulted in establishing many cases both civil and criminal against violators.

Stewart Berkshire, head of the alcohol tax unit of the bureau said: "This unit has been conducting an extensive survey of the black market conditions, which has disclosed numerous violations of internal revenue laws and price ceiling violations on the part of wholesalers and retailers. These investigations are resulting in the seizure of liquors, the arrest of violators, the reporting of cases to United States attorneys for prosecution, and the institution of proceedings to annul or revoke permits of wholesalers."

More than 1000 violators of OPA liquor ceilings have been disclosed by the Nation-wide hunt and actions have been brought, it was announced by the national OPA office. In addition to the $200,000 penalty imposed on Milton S. Kronheim & Sons, Washington, recently, Samuel Fishman of the OPA enforcement staff, announced yesterday that several actions involving larger sums against other firms are pending.

Produce—or Else Is Brewster Hint

By Mary Spargo

Corsairs for the Navy will roll off the production lines of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. smack on schedule from now on or 18,000 aircraft employes will be out of jobs.

This was clear yesterday as the House Naval Affairs subcommittee which has been investigating past production failures of the corporation held an executive session to consider a tentative draft of a report and recommendations which will be made public by the end of next week.

A continual "Sword of Damocles" will be held over the heads of Brewster workers until the Navy gets its full schedule of 1500 Corsair fighters right on the nose, according to revised schedules made by the Navy and the new president of the company, Henry J. Kaiser.

Details Not Disclosed

Although details of the committee report and recommendations were not disclosed, there was no secret of the determination of the subcommittee to recess, not adjourn, thus holding the threat of a recommendation of immediate cancellation of the contract as a weapon to force production which was nearly a total failure until Kaiser took over the plants.

Members were admittedly stung to anger by a personal visit to the Johnsville, Pa., plant this week, where widespread loafing was disclosed despite the fact that the committee had been investigating production failure for many weeks.

Must Produce—or Else

"It's produce, or else, now, and no alibis," one member commented briefly last night.

Should production lag now, or should further labor troubles such as had been almost constant for many months develop, the committee is expected to demand that the Navy cancel its contracts with Brewster immediately. Such a recommendation is admittedly a real threat, since Kaiser recently informed the committee he was convinced the Navy would adopt the committee's suggestions.

After the executive session, Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia refused to reveal any possible recommendations. He said the committee would meet again in executive session next Wednesday to consider a committee print of the report, which would go to Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia for possible revision.

He said that Vinson and the full committee would then decide whether or not to make the report public.

Contract Subject of Study

During the hearings the new labor contract signed by Kaiser with Thomas V. De Lorenzo, president of Local 365, UAW-CIO, was the subject of such protracted study that it is bound to figure in the report.

It is more than probable that the report will recommend that the company and the union agree on a new contract which would return greater powers to management.

Members of the committee have many times expressed dissatisfaction with the new contract, as well as with the old one which preceded it.

Another matter which has figured at length in the hearings concerns the cost to the taxpayers of maintaining on the company payrolls a large number of union officials, described as nonproductive workers. The cost of this has been said to have run as high as half a million dollars. It is extremely probable that the committee will recommend that this system be changed, possibly by a new labor contract.

Voting Trust Believed Favored

In view of the great interest in the voting trust in the Brewster stock held by James Work, A. J. and I. J. Miranda and F. William Zelcer, a trust which gives the Navy control of the plant's board of directors, a recommendation of continuance of the voting trust is likely.

So many members of the subcommittee have from time to time demanded action in the case of De Lorenzo, who admitted to a string of aliases and falsification of official records during his testimony, that it is more than likely the report will bluntly call for action in this case from the Justice Department.

The Justice Department also will be mentioned, it is fair to assume, in connection with the $48,000 lobbying fund raised by Brewster and two other aircraft companies to secure an amendment for their benefit in the 1940 tax bill. The lobbying fund, purely a side issue in the committee's investigation, has been before the District grand jury in a case presented this week by the Justice Department. It is expected that Justice will present further evidence toward the end of next week.

Smoke-Laden
Clouds Get Blame for That Odor

The obnoxious odors which disturbed Washington residents Wednesday night were believed by the Weather Bureau yesterday to have been caused by the chemical reaction on smoke-laden clouds carried by low winds into this area.

Weather Bureau officials refused to guarantee their explanation of the phenomenon, but said that was the reason given after a similar occurrence three years ago, and no one has yet stepped forth to dispute it.

At the same time it was said that December temperatures have averaged 8 degrees above normal here. While the temperature yesterday was exceptional, Weather Bureau officials said it was not abnormal. It was predicted that temperatures for today would be somewhat cooler, mostly cloudy with occasional light rains.

Plan Would Compel Use of Capital Garage

Reviving the Government-operated Capital Garage issue, a proposal will be made to the Senate subcommittee which has been investigating the garage, to make use of its facilities mandatory through congressional action, it was learned yesterday.

The full plan would not only require use of Capital Garage facilities but also would establish other garaging centers where concentration of Government offices would make the proposition economically sound.

This latter would not necessarily mean the purchase or the leasing of more privately owned garages. But the thought expressed to committee representatives has been to take over the operation of facilities already owned by the Government and have them all operated by some central agency, officials said.

The Capital Garage is now operated by the Federal Works Agency, at an estimated cost of approximately $185,000 a year.

The subcommittee to which it is expected the proposal will be made is headed by Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah. Due to various circumstances, the committee has not met for some time and a date for the meeting has not yet been set.

LET THEM HAVE THE COACH SEATS, BERTHS, ROOMS—

December 17 to January 3

—FOR HOLIDAY HOMECOMINGS

We all know many of these boys will be going overseas soon—"invasion day" is not far away. Naturally, they want to spend every hour possible with those near and dear to them.

Now, there isn't enough train equipment to take care of civilians who usually go away over the holidays and homecoming boys and girls in uniform. So why not, in the good old Christmas spirit, give up any plans you may be making to travel between DECEMBER 17 and JANUARY 3? Let the soldiers, the sailors, the marines, the coast guardsmen—the girls in the Services—have what coach seats and Pullman accommodations are available for the period specified. That's a "present" they'll appreciate!

Flimsy Opposition

Some excellent criticism of the McCarran bill has been offered in the hearings before the Senate District Committee. The testimony of both experts and citizen representatives clearly shows that the bill can be much improved before being sent to the Senate floor. Dr. Meyer Jacobstein of the Brookings Institution analyzed the bill in detail for the committee and offered a series of constructive amendments. Other useful suggestions have come from Kenneth P. Armstrong of the Burroughs Citizens Association; Mrs. Eugene Duffield, president of the Voteless District League of Women Voters; Wilbur Finch, chairman of the local suffrage committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and various others. Their constructive discussion strengthens our belief that the bill can be shaped into a practical and desirable charter for the District.

We were not impressed, however, by the purely negative opposition of Joseph C. McGarraghy, who spoke for the Board of Trade. When Mr. McGarraghy referred to the present form of local government as being "efficient and practical," we could not help wondering whether he has ever been to Gallinger Hospital, Blue Plains, the Children's Receiving Home or, for that matter, any other institution that is operated in the name of humanity in this Capital City. And what thought has he given to the chaotic procedure by which the local government operates? Mr. McGarraghy mentioned numerous reports on the District government in recent years as being the basis of the conclusion made by the Board of Trade. But those studies show that the District government is a Donnybrook Fair of the utmost confusion. All are in agreement that the present makeshift system is in need of a thorough overhauling, and not simply a larger grant of power to the Board of Commissioners, as Mr. McGarraghy suggests.

Probably more disturbing is the implication that Mr. McGarraghy carried this protest to the District Committee on the strength of conclusions made within the Board of Trade four or five years ago. Apparently there was no referendum among Board of Trade members on the McCarran bill. Instead a special committee applied the reasoning of those who controlled the board in 1939 to the present situation and came out with a rule-of-thumb opposition to any local suffrage bill. To say the least, the efforts of Senator McCarran and his colleagues to give this neglected community a local government of its own deserve a more courteous response than that from the Board of Trade. Since the board's action was taken in 1939 Washington has undergone momentous changes. Its problems have become much more complicated and Congress has found it more difficult to give time to them. If the members of the Board of Trade have not had a chance to take these factors into consideration, to analyze the terms of the McCarran bill and to express their views currently, the opposition which is spoken in their name certainly doesn't carry much weight. And we don't believe that the committee will give it much.

Upgrade

The British and American war effort against Japan scraped bottom just two years ago today. On the heels of Pearl Harbor, the great British warships, Prince of Wales and Repulse, were caught without air support off the coast of Malaya by Japanese bombers and torpedo planes and sent to the bottom of the Pacific. Far Eastern sea control was indisputably in the enemy's hands. In consequence, the Philippines, Singapore, the Netherlands East Indies all fell swiftly into Tojo's aggressive grasp.

It took time to recover from the body blows sustained by the American and British navies on December 7 and December 10. We fell back on the defensive. Even the protection of Australia, and of our long, exposed life line to it, hung in the balance. Gradually our losses were repaired. The Navy grew again in strength. In the Coral Sea and at the Solomon Islands it taught the Japanese that it was still very much alive. Its planes at Midway and its submarines in remote parts of the Pacific whittled down the Japanese naval strength which briefly ruled the western part of that ocean.

Today control of all the Pacific is shifting back into our hands. Seizure of the Gilbert Islands and the blow struck just a few days ago at the Marshalls are gauges of our power. Japan's navy has shown no zest for the challenge to come out and trade punches in the open. Instead it husbands its strength in a cautious defense. This does not mean that its strength is not still very great, fortified as it is by land-based aviation in a congeries of islands. But the sources of its strength are not as great as those of our own Navy. We are outbuilding and outfighting the sea power of Japan.

Citizens In Uniform

Our consideration of the several so-called soldier-voting proposals starts from the premise that men and women called to the service of their country should be enabled to take part in next year's elections. These elections may greatly affect the purposes for which those persons are fighting. Thus their temporary disfranchisement might produce a dangerous disaffection. In any case we need their voices in the shaping of our national course.

With the premise that citizens in uniform should be enabled to vote, nearly all Congressmen avow agreement. But the fact is that the Senate has not effectively enabled them to do so through its passage of the Eastland-McKellar-McClellan bill. Very little purpose is served in impugning the motives of those who supported the substitution of this measure for the far more effective Green-Lucas bill. In accusing them of an "unpatriotic and unholy alliance," Senator Guffey injected into the issue an extremely dangerous spirit of sectionalism and a resentment which may make dispassionate reconsideration impossible.

One of the sponsors of the Eastland-McKellar-McClellan bill, Senator Byrd, said in the Senate on Tuesday: "No member of the Senate is more anxious than I to afford the privilege of voting to those who are serving in our armed forces." As an indication of his sincerity, he declared, "It is my hope that, if necessary, a conference of Governors will be held so that uniform regulations may be adopted in each State, and I have urged the Governor of Virginia, Colgate Darden, to initiate a movement to secure uniform voting regulations among the States."

Senator Byrd should know that this will be necessary at the very least. And of itself it will by no means be sufficient. Special sessions of the legislatures will have to be called in a number of the States. Vigorous efforts will have to be made to secure adequate provisions for absentee balloting. Nothing less than a determined Nation-wide campaign can produce the results which Senator Byrd has avowed it as his desire to achieve. The test of his sincerity and of those who voted with him will lie in the energy with which they labor to bring about effective State action.

Meanwhile there remains on the statute books the Ramsay Soldier Voting Act which became law in September, 1942. It differs from the abandoned Green-Lucas bill only in that it provides for the printing of soldier ballots by the States instead of by a Federal commission and permits inclusion on the ballot of State candidates. Its chief deficiency lies in the fact that ballots printed by the State after primaries have been held cannot reach all servicemen overseas in time to enable them to vote. The constitutional issues raised over the Green-Lucas bill strike one as somewhat illusory in view of the fact that its essential provisions were enacted into law more than a year ago and continue to be operative today.

What was rejected in the Green-Lucas bill was its provision for a Federal Ballot Commission. This amounted only to a device for putting ballots into the hands of servicemen in time to make their voting effective. Those who destroyed it are in honor bound, therefore, to devise some alternative method for the implementation of soldier voting. If it can be done through State governments, well and good. Congressman Worley has advanced a compromise proposal under which the States voluntarily would empower the national Government to issue a Federal war ballot in their names. This would remove any taint of Federal encroachment on State sovereignty. But it can be brought about only through determined, concerted effort.

The men and women in uniform are unlikely to be satisfied with mere expressions of solicitude. They want to vote and they are entitled to vote. It is up to the sponsors of the Eastland-McKellar-McClellan bill to make this measure into something more than a pious resolution. Nothing less than real enfranchisement of the citizens in the armed services will do.

Balkan Jitters

Whatever Turkey's immediate or long-range intentions may be, it is evident that the Cairo meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and President Ismet Inonu has caused agitation among Germany's Balkan allies, particularly in Bulgaria. Bulgaria has always been the least compliant, the most independent, of Hitler's satellites. The reason is that no Bulgarian government would dare, no matter how great the pressure from Berlin might be, to take Bulgaria into the war against Russia. Indeed, pro-Russian sentiment in Bulgaria is so great that some observers are convinced that a free vote of the people of that country would show an overwhelming majority in favor of entry into the Soviet Union.

Be that as it may, it is clear that the Bulgar government and people, as well as Germany, are, as a result of the Cairo Conference, under notice that an invasion of the Balkans from the direction of Turkey is a possibility. The possibility may not become a reality for months, if ever. But neither Hitler nor the Sofia authorities can ignore it. Hence the last days have seen a considerable movement of troops south through Bulgaria to the border separating that country from Turkey, while, on the other hand, Turkey has hastened the fortification of the Dardanelles and has begun rounding up Axis agents within her borders. These may be merely preliminary and precautionary moves with no immediate end in mind. But it appears already to have forced Germany to undertake a further diversion of its shrinking manpower and materiel. Thus the Teheran and Cairo conferences are already beginning to pay dividends.

Cold News

The misunderstanding over the release of the communiques concerning the Allied conferences was in strange contrast to the general and complete understanding they celebrated. Here was a note that still continues to jar. Even the results of the parley with the Turks were published by the Turks ahead of the other countries represented. In every case, from Cairo to Teheran and back to Cairo, the United States from the standpoint of information has tagged along at the very rear of the procession. The anguish of American newspapers and of American newspapermen on the spot should be understandable to the general reader. Indeed, he has shared the professionals' indignation. The American public has come to expect something different from their newspapers. If the press of this country in the days of free communications was not always first with world news, it was most often first. By the time war broke out a reputation had been built up for giving the American people all the news and for giving it to them without delay.

But there is a more serious side to the general beating which the American press has recently sustained other than its own and its readers' discomfiture. This is that not only have we been beaten by our Allies and friends; we have been beaten by our enemies. Picking up the scoops of Reuter's, Tass, and the Anatolian News Agency, the Germans got a head start over the OWI and thus were able to score throughout the world as the first with the news. Moreover, before we could wake up, they coated the news with their own interpretation.

Without doubt this series of mishaps is aptly described by the World's Press News as "gross mishandling of the biggest news story of the war." Accusations have been freely bandied about. The fault lies primarily with our allies and friends, who, apparently, did not keep the deadline which had been decided upon by the conferences. This example of noncooperation, of a failure to keep a pledged word, is disheartening. If under the pressure of war, cooperation is impossible, how in the world can we expect cooperation in time of peace? Will it continue to be everybody for himself and the devil take the hindmost?

In the spleen which has naturally been created, Elmer Davis, Director of the OWI, has come in for a goodly share of criticism. He has become a whipping boy. But, as the facts come to be known, Mr. Davis was scooped with the rest of us. He tagged along, in his short-wave propaganda service, on the heels of the German service. Evidently he had no part in the press arrangements at the receiving end, let alone at the sending end. In this country the authority belonged to Mr. Steve Early, the President's press secretary. Whether, if the OWI had been either at the President's elbow or in Mr. Early's position, dog eat dog would have been avoided may be doubted. Nevertheless, the conflict of authority over information at home is a clear invitation to trouble. It is of a piece with the overlapping of function which is the characteristic of the administration of the war on the home front.

The fact is that the President seems to be either unwilling to define or incapable of defining the jobs of his administrators. At least, if he does define them in his own executive orders, he is the first to ignore them. Jurisdictional disputes, in consequence, seem never to cease. Notorious examples of recent months have been those between th War Labor Board and Secretary Ickes over the coal award and between Secretary Morgenthau and Judge Vinson over tax recommendations. We haven't heard that Mr. Davis has gone to bat over the gradual supersession of his responsibility. Perhaps he feels that it would be useless.

Yet he and he alone should be the channel—or at least the final authority—for war information. In the last war Mr. Creel, who was the Elmer Davis of the last war, is said to have insisted on the withdrawal by the Secretary of Labor of a strike notice. The notice was then reissued, but by Mr. Creel. Of course, Mr. Creel had to deal with a President who had a better sense of organization than Mr. Roosevelt has. Mr. Roosevelt has a casualness toward the problems of administration which is bound to set the administrators at loggerheads. It is accompanied by a fickleness toward his administrators which likewise undermines their prestige. Certainly Mr. Davis and the OWI have lost prestige. Only a relation with the President similar to that which Brendan Bracken enjoys with Mr. Churchill could possibly retrieve it. The ideal OWI head in this Administration, in other words, would be an intimate like Mr. Harry Hopkins or Mr. Steve Early.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE

Here all about us, now, one desolate gesture:
Here is the autumn's story, which she tells
With motion suited and in suited vesture,
The stricken separations and farewells;
The bitter smell of ruin, everywhere,
Is telling over again the tragic tale:
The careless death of what was all our care,
The failing of what seemed too fair to fail.
Not you and I, alone, but all things, here,
Follow the dark persuasion, play the part
Assigned to players in the mortal year . . .
Look, now, this leaf . . . and that . . . your heart . . . my heart,
See how they turn, and break, and make their own
The world's long grief that each must bear alone.

Mr. Byrnes' Speech

By Mark Sullivan

Asks For Subsidies

THE FOOD subsidies fight is the most boiling thing in Washington. The boiling is bringing about a change of attitude this week.

Food subsidies, in their simplest form, can be illustrated by what is done about milk. A farmer sells his milk in the usual way, to a private wholesale distributor. He receives his payment, usually 3 to 4 cents a pound. Then the farmer takes a statement — showing the amount of milk he has sold—to a Government agent in his neighborhood. The Government agent, after some red tape, pays the farmer a subsidy of some half a cent a pound. The subsidy is not a gift to the farmer—it is part payment of his cost of production. So far as the subsidy is a gift, it is a gift to the consumer—payment of a part of the price which the consumer would otherwise have to pay. A practice similar to milk is followed as to several other forms of food.

This practice Congress is disposed to end. The House has passed a bill ending it by a more than 2-to-1 majority—literally 278 to 117. The bill is now before the Senate Committee on Agriculture for hearings and is expected to come before the full Senate for action next week. There is furious turmoil over it.

IN THIS situation, Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, who is in effect first deputy to the President, made a radio address to the Nation this week, persuasive in tone and essentially convincing. Mr. Byrnes' address contained the reasons for continuing food subsidies, and accounts for the change of attitude now taking place.

But first, why did two-thirds of the House vote against subsidies? The reasons were many—some sound, some angrily emotional. The reasons include: Belief that all subsidies are unsound in principle. Belief that this subsidy will not work, will not actually avert rise in prices and inflation. Belief that the subsidy system, once adopted, would automatically grow—larger and larger subsidies on each commodity, more and more commodities to be covered, not only farm commodities but practically everything.

Many of the reasons were resentments: Resentment not merely against subsidies but against the Administration's whole conduct of price control and rationing, the methods used. Especially, resentment against the Administration's whole attitude toward farming—the regimenting of farmers by means of past subsidies for limiting crops, coupled with fear that the present subsidy would be used to the same end. Resentment against labor leaders as the chief demanders of food subsidies; and resentment against the Administration's greater deference to labor leaders than to other groups, as illustrated by the John L. Lewis case. A feeling that labor leaders hold a gun to the head of the Administration, saying that unless the Administration grants subsidies on food, the labor leaders will demand higher wages. A feeling that the Administration in turn, points the gun against Congress.

THESE ARE the reasons for the two-thirds vote against subsidies in the House. Not all these reasons were answered by Mr. Byrnes. But Mr. Byrnes did give a convincing reason why the Administration should be permitted to use subsidies—in some form and degree. Mr. Byrnes stated explicitly and implicitly, over and over, that if subsidies are discontinued there will be an immediate rise of some 7 per cent in prices of food, and a greater rise later. He said that the Administration relies on subsidies in its fight against inflation—that if it is denied subsidies it cannot win the fight. This was the central theme of Mr. Byrnes address.

This calls on Congress to permit subsidies, for reasons of principle, and expediency. On principle, Congress has given the Administration the job of holding prices down and preventing inflation—and Congress owes it to the Administration to give it what tools it asks. The fight against high prices and inflation must be conducted by the Administration—it cannot be conducted in detail by Congress. To deny a tool the Administration asks would be like denying to the Army an instrument the Army says is indispensable.

On reasons of expediency, if the Administration is denied subsidies, and if thereafter runaway prices and inflation come, the Administration will be able to say that Congress is to blame. At the same time, if subsidies are granted and if they fail; if thereafter runaway prices and inflation come, the blame will be where the responsibility is and ought to be—on the Administration.

Just Taxation

Is it not shocking, if true, that people do not want to face the fact that we must pay for this war by taxation by "bigger and better taxes"?

Can't they be realistic, and less selfish? Those who are not called upon to fight it should uncomplainingly accept a just measure of taxation and thank their lucky stars!

It would be a patriotic service to so inform their Congressmen and demand at the same time that Government expenses, when possible, be cut. M. D. CASTLES.

Rebirth Of Russia

By Paul Schubert

Evolution Of A Revolution

THERE IS something very symbolic about the photographs of Marshal Stalin as he appeared at the Teheran conference. The marshal's uniform, so well tailored, so neatly pressed, was very different from the blouse of a proletarian revolutionary. "Marshal"—the title is a long way from the "comrade" of an earlier day.

Uncle Joe has made the change that Russia has been making.

It is an extraordinary thing that Russia has been able to make this change, in a world full of turmoil, without overthrow of the government. This stability speaks much for the flexibility and soundness of the Russian governmental structure. It also speaks well for the Russian temperament, which is perhaps less screwball, less "Asiatic," less conspiratory, than the events of the last half century have taught the world to believe.

Indeed, measured in terms of performance since 1939, the Russians are prodigious organizers, capable of extraordinary discipline, and with an efficiency superior to the much-vaunted German efficiency.

BUT WE, HERE in the United States, can readily understand why the Russians have been able to make this change. Leaving political ideologies out of it, the spread of popular education has alone been sufficient to re-create the Russian people—to make of them a nation whose thinking processes can be harnessed creatively.

The Russia that we knew before the World War of 1914-1918 was a nation of intelligent men and women condemned to stultifying ignorance.

It is hard to realize what a short time it is since this ignorance was the universal lot of mankind—how recently it is that the printing press appeared to serve as the true instrument of human revolution. How swiftly knowledge spread among the masses of western Europe—how that knowledge served as a creative ferment, giving birth not only to the scientific era, but to the era of human rights, to the English revolution, the American Revolution, the French Revolution—to the tormented world that we know today, groping to master the new machines of power, the new ideas of self-government and international relations.

In this extraordinary Western development Russia was left behind. Russia did have a small, highly cultivated, amazingly gifted "intelligentsia," a powerful literature, a great music. Russian scientists, physicians, mathematicians did great things.

But these men were only a tiny fraction of the great flood of Russian intellectual power dammed up behind barriers of ignorance—an ignorance deliberately fostered by an outmoded feudal system of government. A stupid, inefficient system of government, which was just smart enough to realize that if the ordinary Russian once acquired schooling and knowledge, the first thing to go overboard would be the rule of the aristocracy.

IT WAS because of this circumstance that the Russia of 40 and 50 years ago had become a nation of conspirators, rebels and revolutionaries, explosive with passionate hatred of tyranny, until every man of spirit belonged to some group plotting overthrow and reform. Our cartoonists of the day customarily portrayed the Russian as a bewhiskered man in a blouse, holding a round, black bomb with a lighted fuse sticking out one side of it. Early Mack Sennett comedies made much use of these revolutionaries as funny men.

But with the coming of the actual revolution in Russia all humor vanished from the scene.

The revolution was one of history's bloodiest and most violent chapters. Centuries of resentment against constituted authority swept the Russian people. The "conspirator," so recently an outcast hiding from the police, became the leader of revolt.

Other states, looking on, forgot the crude hours in which other human liberty had been struggled for with the naked hands and the naked blade.

The Russians became pariahs.

The new Russian state, for all its strange revolutionary shape, did set about its job with a sense of duty to the people never shown by earlier Russian governments.

The new Russian state did undertake to spread education—the simple rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic which made it possible for ambitious youngsters and powerful brains, when and where they appeared, to read books and aspire to higher learning.

We can appreciate what reading means — remember young Lincoln, who read books in a log cabin . . . suppose he had never had the opportunity to learn to read?

After 25 years we see Russia transformed. The nation of dolts and peasant clods discovers that it has power—that it ranks as a power. In two years of war the young union finds itself. Uncle Joe realizes that he dares put on the uniform of a marshal—he has grown to something more than a "comrade."

The Teheran conference was a great milestone.

Butler's Bomb

The speech of Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska hit Latin America like a bomb-shell. If the Senator's intention was to prove that cooperation and friendship are the essence of the Good-Neighbor Policy advocated by President Roosevelt and his friends, he could not have done a better job. After years of American imperialism the peoples of Latin America became suspicious in regard to the intentions of this country. Most of them preferred to deal with European countries rather than with the United States. With the Administration of President Roosevelt the situation changed radically. Instead of the arrogancy, contempt, and ill feelings of old times, Mr. Roosevelt started a policy of friendliness, goodwill and cooperation. This policy started long before any one imagined that a tremendous international catastrophe was going to break out and at a time when no one realized that certain parts of South America would become vital strategic points.

When the Chief Executive of the United States started his Good-Neighbor Policy, no one knew that Japan was going to attack Pearl Harbor and take all the Far East sources of rubber, quinine and other raw materials vital not only to the war but also to civilians. No one could have guessed, at that time, that the United States would some years later become dependent upon the Latin-American resources.

Mr. Butler is mistaken when he says that the Latin Americans do not believe in the sincerity of the Good-Neighbor Policy. Brazilian people were deeply hurt by such an assertion. The Latin Americans not only believe in the Good-Neighbor Policy but are also aware that the United States is doing its best to prove its sincerity of purposes by means of concrete acts. In Brazil, for instance, the enthusiasm for the cause of other allied nations is so great that they are trying to export everything they have, even at the sacrifice of the Brazilian people themselves. The Brazilian government recently was forced to issue a decree forbidding the exportation of meat, because the people were sending the whole national production to the United States, depleting this way the stock of the nation. The same thing is happening toward coffee, sugar, vegetable oils, tungsten, quartz crystal, manganese, bauxite, iron ore, mica, and what not. All over Brazil, even in the smallest villages, all the inhabitants, rich and poor, old and young, man and woman, are campaigning for the collection of scrap materials. They build huge pyramids, framed with wood, and the population, as a whole, try to fill those gigantic towers with all kinds of strategic things, from the modest cans from

Investigate "Farm Groups"

I followed, with a great deal of interest, your editorial policy on the problems of agriculture, and find it quite praiseworthy, especially your views on the Farm Security Administration.

We read in the newspapers that "the farm groups" demand this or that, that 'the farm organizations" are opposed to this or that.

Reserving my own views on the composition of these "farm groups" and "farm organizations," I would suggest to you, Mr. Editor, that an investigation be made by you as to the exact membership of these pressure groups who represent themselves to be "farmers," and the results of such investigation be published.

The magnitude of the task makes it prohibitive for one farmer or a small group of farmers to "expose" these groups, but the importance of such investigation to the country is so great that it would warrant the undertaking of the task by a great newspaper.

ALEXANDER S. WINNETT.
Washington, Dec. 2.

poor workers to silver and bronze statues from millionaires. There is no record of a national movement in my country which caused so much enthusiasm among the people. Besides that, our army is preparing a huge force to be sent to Europe to fight side by side with our fellows, the North Americans. Our navy and air force are doing a good job in the destruction of Nazi U-boats.

The Senator said that the United States Government's representatives are so numerous in Brazil that they are called "The United States' Expeditionary Force." Of course, Mr. Butler failed to appreciate the proverbial good humor of Brazilians. Due to the great number of scholarships and invitations of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Department of War, press associations and several private enterprises, thousands of Brazilians are coming to visit and to study in this country. It is said that Brazilians are "invading" the United States, Miami is called the bridgehead of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force in the United States. (Miami is the first stop of airplanes from Brazil.) There is current now in my country a joke which says that in Brazil, at present, there are only two big parties (in Brazil there are no longer political parties), that is to say: The party of those who were in the United States (and they are so proud that they don't pay attention to anybody else) and the party of those who were not in the United States (and they are infuriated because they could not get a chance to come).

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey On Teheran

Dear Harriet:

These conferences have me dizzy. I was no sooner through with Cairo than along comes Teheran. Well, Harriet, I was in Teheran myself at the time helping get in supplies for the conference and I hope it is the last for a few months on account of Churchill and Roosevelt looked pretty exhausted and was beginning to suffer from homesickness. Stalin, though, looked fresh as a daisy. In fact, he hardly had no dust on him.

I thought he should of acted a little more worn out even if he wasn't, just so as not to show up his two partners. He is a very snappy huddler and uses the Moscow system, which is to make the other fellows come to you or nearly so, and then not be off the job so long that it causes any talk. He is a man of few words and if we can depend on them few words all is jake.

I was glad the Teheran declaration was short and snappy and did not ball me all up geographically by a long list of places it was going to make the Germans give up. It did not say nothing about no strip tease putting Germany back where it was 85 years ago like it said about the Japanese at Cairo. I gess making them Heinies give up what they stole within the last five years would be enuff.

What the Heinies took is pretty well concentrated in one spot and is not scattered all around like what the Japs took. You can get the general idea from one or two pages of maps and not have to study eight or ten.

The declaration says, "No power on earth can stop our destroying the German armies." So I gess they are satisfied with what we and the boys has shown in this war so far. It says the Big Three has made all the plans to shoot the works so if you don't hear from me regular you will understand I am extra busy.

There was nothing said about a uncondishunal surrender, so I gess this is the tip-off to the German people that if they stop being dumb and slap the paste bucket over Hitler's ears where it belongs they can get a better break. It is a plain invite to the Heinies to recognize them beer hall brigadiers for the bums they are. How any Germans can check up on things today and not see how all these screwballs ever had was harsh voices, good radio hook-ups, dirty minds and a few wrong steers on "How to Be a Bandit" is beyond me.

Well, anyhow, between the text of their Cairo and Teheran statements, I get a better picture of what my job is and I feel better. I am not worried about the war now so much as about our President and Churchill. They must be all in, and I hope they get a good rest where they need no interpreters to get breakfast in bed or leave word that they are not to be disturbed.

You can say what you want no President should go AWOL so often. He is now out ahead of Mrs. Roosevelt on mileage by two full world tours. It is not a good idea. The first thing you know Mr. Roosevelt will be absent-mindedly addressing Congress in a Persian fez, putting a couple of camels on the Supreme Court bench and opening a radio talk to the American people with "My Persian friends and Egypshun neighbors."

Well, this is all for now an' I hope you are well and do not have too much coupon trouble.

Love, OSCAR.

Christmas Cards

Must we be told whether we should send Christmas greetings or not?

Because some officers see each other every day is there any reason why the other members of the family cannot enjoy greetings from their friends?

What comment has The Post and Postmaster to make regarding the attached notice?

MRS. J. R. RAMSAY.
Arlington, Va., Dec. 5.

Headquarters Military District of Washington.
Subject: Holiday Greetings.
To All Concerned:

1. It has been suggested that members of this command refrain from the exchange of Christmas cards. Believing that where there is personal contact such cards are superfluous as well as burdensome, the Commanding General is glad to concur in the above suggestion. He also ventures to suggest that courtesy and good will manifested throughout the year, far outweigh printed or engraved missives.

2. The Commanding General desires that the above information be published on each organization bulletin board.

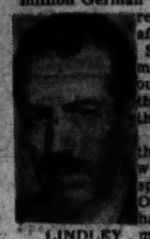
By command of Major General Lewis. H. B. RUMSEY,
Major, AGD, Adjutant General.
Washington, Nov. 22.

Editorial Note: We concur in the suggestion of Major General Lewis. We believe that every effort should, at this time, be made to free the mails for essential war correspondence.

German Reparations

By Ernest Lindley

Forced Labor Program



WILLIAM GREEN is aroused by reports that the Soviet government intends to conscript 2 million German workers to help rebuild Russia after the war. Such "enslavement," he says, is out of line with the war aims of the free nations. Speaking for the AFL in short-wave broadcast sponsored by the OWI, Mr. Green has pledged German LINDLEY war toilers freedom from Nazi bonds and a chance to work out their problems democratically when the Nazis fall. Green warns that the AFL will oppose conscription with all its power; he calls on President Roosevelt to see to it that the position is understood and agreed to by the other war leaders (meaning Stalin).

The labor chief thus manifests the AFL's concern lest its own postwar program be undermined. In concert with the British Trades Union Council and some of the refugee French labor leaders, the AFL is working to restore the once powerful German trade unions. In reunionized German labor the three groups see a bulwark against the return of fascism or conquest of the Reich by communism, and a potent ally in whatever international labor organization emerges with the peace.

Does Stalin have a German reparations plan which would substitute Soviet for Nazi shackles and thus nullify the AFL-OWI pledge? Washington official experts familiar with Moscow pronouncements on the problem doubt it. A wholesale forced-labor program would alienate the working classes from Sovietism everywhere, and bulwark Germany against Bolshevism as labor unions never could. To say the least, the experts consider the AFL alarm premature.

PROF. EUGENE VARGA, head of the Russian Institute of Economics, friend and adviser of Stalin, is the Soviet sponsor of reparations through labor. Press dispatches last September credited him with stating in a Moscow lecture that 10 years' toll by 10 (not 1) million Germans would repair the damage their armies did in Russia. But he did not say that the Soviet regime would require this colossal effort to the ounce, or that what it did demand would, as Mr. Green apparently assumes, fall heaviest on the working class.

In a Newsweek article at the time, Raymond Moley labeled Varga's position a "bargaining" proposal, or, as official sources here now construe it, a trial balloon. For in a more recent outline in the Soviet mouthpiece, War and the Working Class, condensed and lately reprinted in the Soviet Embassy's Information Bulletin here, Varga takes a more moderate approach.

Estimating lumped Allied claims against Germany at 160 to 200 billion dollars, the professor, first of all, concedes that "it can hardly be expected that full compensation can ever be made;" he reckons the total post-armistice wealth of bombed-out Germany and its satellites, Italy, Finland, Hungary and Rumania, at no more than 70 billion dollars.

Varga says the immensity of Russia's devastation entitles her to the bulk of the indemnity. However, he proposes a distribution, "not in proportion to absolute damages, but compensation first to countries whose damage is largest compared to their national wealth." Such a formula, he says, would work to the advantage of German-occupied Poland, Greece and Norway, as well as to Russia, assuring each immediate help toward economic recovery.

EXPERIENCE AFTER the last war proved the fallacy of money reparations: the Germans, Varga points out, paid with the proceeds of foreign loans, on which there came a moratorium, then repudiation. This time, he says, the "main stress" must be laid on payments in kind—machinery, livestock, seeds, fertilizers, minerals, which the Axis nations have on hand or can produce. He excludes all questions of "punishment" but argues the injustice of permitting the Germans, after the war, "to live better than their victims."

Almost as an after-thought, Varga declares just and expedient the "requisition" also of German labor power for rebuilding cities, factories, bridges and railroads, particularly in the Soviet Union, millions of whose citizens the Germans enslaved and forced to produce weapons against their own countrymen.

Our experts see nothing unreasonable or unworkable in Varga's outline, as developed thus far. American and British policy on reparations is as yet uncrystallized. Competent sources indicate, however, that neither government proposes to impede the collection of just claims by others, harder hit; rather, each hopes, by the example of self-restraint, to influence the others against imposing unbearable burdens, which would sow the seeds of future war.

A contract by a future German government with Russia or other reparations claimants to supply technicians at a going wage paid from German revenues would probably encounter no objection by our government and should draw none from the AFL. Moscow may have some such device in mind. As for the myriad crimes the Russians and others have catalogued against individual Germans, their expiation by penal servitude instead of the firing squad might be a relief to a blood-surfeited world.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 9.—Republican voters in Pennsylvania are inclined to agree with Alf M. Landon in placing Thomas E. Dewey at the head of the list of possible Republican presidential nominees for 1944.

Although Governor Dewey's strength as measured in Institute surveys has declined somewhat in Pennsylvania since September, he remains the leading choice of Keystone State Republicans. Wendell Willkie runs second, and General Douglas MacArthur third.

That is the indication from a survey just completed by the Institute among the rank and file of Republican voters in Pennsylvania. When asked to state their choice among a list of Republican nomination possibilities most talked about, they voted as follows. Comparable standings in a similar September survey are also shown:

	Sept.	Today
Dewey	39%	36%
Willkie	30	29
MacArthur	16	19
Taft	7	6
Bricker	5	5
Stassen	1	5
Others	2
	Less	Than 1

Stassen, as the table shows, has picked up 4 percentage points since September; MacArthur has gained 3, while both both Willkie and Dewey show at least some percentage decline.

Stassen's increase possibly reflects renewed hopes among his followers that he will be a candidate next year, since Nebraska's Assistant Secretary of State John B. Quinn announced intention of filing Stassen's name for the Nebraska presidential primary in April.

It should be borne in mind, of course, that the standings as of today are subject to such changes as may result from future developments. Moreover, the above ratings merely show the standings of these men in relation to the others and do not constitute a forecast of the Pennsylvania primary.

Steinbeck Relates How Lieutenant's Bluff Persuaded German Commander to Surrender

By John Steinbeck

STEINBECK

The lieutenant walked slowly up the hill toward the German positions. He carried his white flag over his head and his white flag was a bath towel. As he walked he thought what a fool he was. He had really stuck his neck out. Last night when he had argued for the privilege of going up and trying to kid the Jerry into surrender, he hadn't known it would be like this. He hadn't known how lonely and exposed he would be.

Forty paratroopers against 87 Jerries, but Jerry didn't know that. The lieutenant also hoped Jerry wouldn't know his guts were turned to water. His feet sounded loud on the path. It was early in the morning and the sun was not up yet. He hoped they could see his white flag. Maybe it would be invisible in this light. He kept in the open as much as possible as he climbed the hill.

He knew that the 40 paratroopers were crawling and squirming behind him, keeping cover, getting into position so that if anything should go wrong they might attack and stand some chance of surprising the Jerry. He knew the field-glasses of the captain would be on the German position waiting for something to happen.

"If they shoot at you, flop and lie still," the captain had said. "We'll try to cover you and get you out."

The lieutenant knew that if he were hit and not killed he would hear the shot after he was hit, but if he was hit in the head he wouldn't hear or feel anything. He hoped, if it happened, it would happen that way. His feet seemed very heavy and clumsy. He looked down and saw the little stones on the patch and he wished he could get down on his knees to see what kind of stones they were

He had a positive hunger to get down out of line. His chest tingled almost as though he were preparing to receive the bullet. And his throat was as tight as it had been once when he tried to make a speech in college.

Step by step he drew nearer, and there was no sign from Jerry. The lieutenant wanted to look back to see whether any of the paratroopers were in sight, but he knew the Germans would have their fieldglasses on him, and they were close enough so that they could even see his expression.

It happened finally, quickly and naturally. He was passing a pile of rocks when a deep voice shouted an order to him. There were three Germans, young-looking men, and they had their rifles trained on his stomach. He stopped and stared at them and they stared back. He wondered whether his eyes were as wide as theirs. They paused and then a hoarse, voice called from up ahead.

The Jerries stood up and they glanced quickly down the hill before they came out to him. And then the four marched on. It seemed a little silly to the lieutenant, like little boys marching up an alley to attack Connor's woodshed. And his bath towel on a stick seemed silly, too. He thought:

"Well, anyway, if they bump me our boys will get these three." In his mind's eye he could see helmeted Americans watching the little procession through their rifle sights.

Ahead was a small, white, stone building but Jerry was too smart to be in the building. A trench started behind the building and led down to a hole almost like a shell hole.

Three officers faced him in the hole. They were dressed in dusty blue and they wore the beautiful high caps of the Luftwaffe with silver eagles and swastikas. They were electronics engineers, a ground service for the German air force. They faced him without speaking and his throat was so tight that for a moment he could not begin.

All he could think of was a green table. Jerry had three deuces showing and the lieutenant a pair of treys. He knew they had no more but they didn't know what his hole card was. He only hoped they wouldn't know, because all he had was that pair of treys.

The oberleutnant regarded him closely and said nothing.

"Do you speak English?" the lieutenant asked.

The lieutenant took a deep breath and spoke the piece he had memorized:

"The colonel's compliments, sir. I am ordered to demand your surrender. At the end of 20 minutes, the cruisers will move up and open fire unless ordered otherwise following your surrender."

He noticed the oberleutnant's eyes involuntarily move toward the direction of the sea. The lieutenant lapsed out of his formality, as he had planned. "What's the good?" he said. "We'll just kill you all. We've got 600 men ashore and the cruisers are aching to take a shot at you. What's the good of it? You'd kill some of us and we'd kill all of you. Why don't you just stack your arms and come in?"

The oberleutnant stared into his eyes. He had seen the same look over the green table. That what's-in-the-hole look. The look balanced—call or toss in, call or toss in. The pause was centuries long and then at last. "What treatment will we receive?" the oberleutnant asked.

"Prisoners of war under Convention of The Hague." The lieutenant was trying desperately to show nothing in his face. There was another long pause. The German breathed in deeply and his breath whistled in his nose.

"It is no dishonor to surrender to superior forces," he said.

Mr. Steinbeck will conclude his account of the Ventotene raid in Monday's Post.

The money was sent in response to a plea made by Oscar Fraenckel, president of the now liquidated B'nai B'rith in Copenhagen, Denmark, who at present is heading the refugee members in Sweden.

Biddle Doubts WRA's Right To Hold Japs

by the Associated Press

Doubt that the War Relocation Authority constitutionally could hold American citizens of Japanese ancestry in its centers was expressed yesterday by Attorney General Francis Biddle.

As a solution to problems raised by disturbances at the Tule Lake, Calif., relocation camp, he suggested legislation to deprive Japanese-Americans avowedly disloyal to this country of their citizenship.

As the final witness before a Dies Subcommittee investigation of the Tule Lake riots of last month, Biddle declared there was no authority in any executive order for WRA to hold a citizen in a center, but that Japanese had feared to test the issue through writs of habeas corpus.

The agency, Biddle continued, was set up essentially for "social service" purposes to see that Japanese removed from the West Coast had a place to live while finding more permanent homes, adding:

"The WRA has no legal technical right of interning any American citizen."

Biddle emphasized that:

Japan is watching closely this country's treatment of Japanese and will model its handling of American prisoners accordingly.

If present proposals were carried out to transfer the Tule Lake center permanently to the Army, which stepped into control last month, American prisoners probably would be placed under Japanese army control instead of the Japanese military police.

Japan so far has followed terms of the Geneva agreement in the treatment of international prisoners.

The Attorney General said he believed it was possible to screen loyal from disloyal Japanese.

John Doe, old campaigner

QUITE a lot of campaigns are represented by those ribbons. Important ones.

There was that time when the big naval guns saved the day at Salerno . . . the business in North Africa, when a swarm of General Sherman tanks blasted Rommel's super-tanks, the Tigers, into helpless hulks . . . the day in the South Pacific when Yank planes saw to it that 17 Jap ships abruptly stopped serving the Son of Heaven.

John wasn't there in person. But he had a hand in every bit of the action. His carefully-saved kitchen fats went into explosives for the shells. His part in the scrap iron and rubber collections helped swell the numbers of those General Shermans. The planes attacked partly on the gasoline John did without.

And the whole show was made possible by another campaign John's been in since Pearl Harbor . . . the buying of War Bonds with every possible dollar.

Of course, John doesn't really wear those ribbons. But he's earned them. We know. For John Doe is our customer. We see him in our Tydol stations, guarding the life of his tires, economizing on his gas ration, keeping his car fit and in the fight — even though he can't use it much. It's a pleasure for us to help him.

No, pleasure's not the word. Make it — an honor.

Gun Gifts Help Get Rubber, Official Claims

Douglas H. Allen, president of the Rubber Development Corp., told the Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture and Forestry yesterday that in the process of getting an estimated 23,700 tons of natural rubber from the Amazon Basin, the United States has sent down 5000 sewing machines for the tree-tappers' wives, 37,023 shotguns for the tappers themselves, and 26 million tin cups for collecting latex from trees growing wild in the jungles.

Defending the sewing machines and shotguns as "incentive trade goods" which were sold to the natives at cost through middlemen, Allen said the items were shipped for "exactly the same reason that they are shipping rouge and lipsticks to North Africa—to get something out of the people."

The subcommittee, seeking proof of charges of waste and boondoggling in the Latin-American rubber program, heard from Allen that the RDC and its predecessor, the Rubber Reserve Co., from 1942 through December 31, 1943, will have spent $83,162,823 on the wild rubber program in the Western Hemisphere, including $59,710,477 in the Amazon.

Reports on Imports

Against this, Allen reported rubber imports from April, 1942, through December 31, 1943, at an estimated 45,000 long tons, of which 23,700 tons is from the Amazon. He said that charging all expenditures against these imports would give a cost of 82 cents a pound for rubber from all Western Hemisphere sources and from the Amazon countries alone of $1.12 a pound.

By the end of the rubber agreements with Brazil, Bolivia and Peru on December 31, 1946, he said, Amazon rubber will have cost 75 cents a pound.

Paul E. Hadlick, subcommittee counsel, drew from Allen the information that RDC originally ordered 7065 sewing machines from the Work Projects Administration, "which was liquidating its sewing projects." Of these 5000 were earmarked for Brazil and 2000 for Bolivia. Only 5000 were shipped, Allen said, and the orders for the others were canceled. He said each machine cost between $17.50 and $20.

Some Held for Disposal

About 3000 sewing machines are being held for disposal, he said, and may be turned over to the Lend-Lease Administration. Allen called sewing machines "one of the best incentive goods for South America, where money payments don't mean a thing if you're more or less a primitive type of man."

Allen said 78,223 shotguns had been ordered and 37,023 shipped for eventual resale to native rubber tappers, who use them in hunting game for food and animal skins to increase their income. Denying that any of the guns had been sold in sporting goods stores in Rio de Janeiro, Allen said that the natives thought of guns "like the cowboys in the Wild West who wanted a pistol in their belt." Each gun is worth $9 or $10 he said.

Man Convicted On Tire Charge

John Baldwin, 45, Negro, of 1322 S st. nw., was found guilty in Municipal Court yesterday of illegal possession of an unregistered tire in violation of Office of Price Administration regulations.

Assistant United States Attorney John J. O'Leary told the court that Baldwin was arrested as he got out of a taxicab clutching the tire under his arm. Trial was before Judge Nathan Margold.

The maximum penalty for the offense is a year in jail or a fine of $10,000.

Duchess of Kent Stricken With Flu

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Duchess of Kent has been stricken with influenza, a wave of which has been spreading through Britain in recent weeks, it was disclosed today. A bulletin said the illness was "taking a normal course."

Meanwhile, King George VI, who was taken ill earlier in the week, was reported making "good progress."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE IRONIST ARRIVES. John Hoystradt, satirist of politicos and everyday citizens, will open in the Statler's Embassy Room next Tuesday. He's probably the only schoolmaster (he taught all the younger Roosevelts) to become a top entertainer. But when in Yale's class of '26 he was president of the Yale Dramatic Association, did biting lampoons of campus figures. These college memories were probably in his mind when he threw up his teaching job in 1937, and started again on the career from which he'd been sidetracked.

The "shuffle rhythm" of Eddie Camden's band, opening at the Metronome Room tonight, promises to be the weekend's major thrill. Demure Sally Powell is the band's singer, but Maestro Eddie also drops his trumpet for an occasional whirl at the vocals.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE will return to El Patio in a few weeks as a single act with Myles Hallett's sparkly little band continuing to play for dancing. Little Jack's piano will be ensconced on a dais in the front part of the room, specially lighted so that one and all can watch his flying fingers.

GLAMOURISH VISITORS. Bernice Parks, Club Jalna's stunning little eyeful and earful, often visits at Ruby Foo's—with Capt. Bentley Ryan of California usually at her elbow . . . Gene Tierney of the flickers recently danced the evening away in the Carlton's Congo Room . . . No less a personage than Secretary of the Navy Knox often visits the Old New Orleans. He and Manager Gerry Garry were both born in Nashua, N. H. . . . Chick Mrs. Lily Santmyer, owner of L'Escargot, and Corpl. Jack Varela ringsided in the Mayflower Lounge the other afternoon . . . Nora Wells, the contralto thrust of Burton's, nearly always manages to attend the afternoon "Treasure Hunts" at Treasure Island. But she never has any luck in finding those doggoned "pieces of eight" that entitle one to a feast on the house.

That lady dynamo, Maria Kramer, owner of the Roosevelt Hotel, is now reported as on the point of buying both a hotel in Syracuse and a chain of theaters.

YOU'LL LIKE the inimitable horsing around of Alan Dale at Paul Young's. There's no one remotely like Alan—more's the pity . . . The high proof stepping of Billy Quinn in the Casino Royal revue. The lad's a marvel—blends ballet grace with swingtime zingo . . . Nora Williams' original song, "Back Street Girl," as it bounces off the walls of the Windsor Room . . . The Silky South Seas rhythm of Ciano and Curcuerra, the Neptune Room's new "Strings of Swing" . . . The romantic voice blending of the Anchor Room's Sterlings in "How Sweet You Are" . . . The Christmas tune medley of Sid Willoughby and Bob D'Arcy at Burt's Trans-Lux . . . The dizzying rhythms of the Afro-Cuban songs done by doll-like Anita Rabal at the Copocabana.

Pete Macias, considerably thinner, is back bandleading in the Lounge Riviera after two weeks of ups-and-downs between the flu and sulfanilimide. Says he hasn't had so much fun since he had croup when he was a kid.

SHORT STORIES. Helen Hamilton, owner of the Troika, says she likes her "H. H." monogram pins "because they always look right even if I put them on upside down or backwards" . . . That minor hurricane in the Madrillon recently was blown up by a diplomat demanding the spot's special Hungarian turkey dressing. Host Borras was in his counting house, counting out points, and Chef Chinto was in the kitchen making victory pie, but they came on the double and the diplomat left, stuffed with Hungarian dressing . . . Jane Marlow and the Heintze Brothers of Restaurant "823" are making Christmas song recordings as holiday presents for Karl Miller, young soldier son of Fred Miller co-owner of the spot . . . Frankie Miller has been going crazy twice a night at Kavakos Grill for nearly five months. The Army doctors insist that Frankie is not strong enough to carry a gun, but he'd have regiments of Japs laughing themselves to death . . . "Friday Musical Nights" at Ciro's give everyone a chance to sing. And you should hear those young soldiers, sailors and marines sound off!

Wife Who Asked Furlough for Mate Told of His Death

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Hopefully, Mrs. Lee Lifschitz, 29, a garment worker, wrote Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., could he arrange a furlough for her husband, Harry, whom she hadn't seen for more than a year.

That was September 8. She waited patiently, not telling Harry of the letter. Finally there came a reply.

Patton wrote on October 4 that he was sorry, but her 33-year-old husband, who had soldiered with the Seventh Army in Sicily, couldn't be given leave. "The shipping situation is so difficult," he explained.

Although disappointed, Mrs. Lifschitz's morale was boosted. She proudly disclosed the general's letter yesterday and said she bet Harry would be "awfully excited" when he learned of it.

A few hours later she received a telegram. It was from the War Department. Silently, Mrs. Lifschitz read:

"Pvt. Harry Lifschitz was killed in action November 9, in Italy."

Myrick Warns Underwriters On Tax Future

By S. Oliver Goodman

Current income and estate taxes are oppressive and tend to stifle initiative, members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association were told yesterday at a luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel.

MR. MYRICK

The large gathering of underwriters and their guests was told by Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the board of the American College of Life Underwriters, that taxpayers must "start talking with their legislator friends right now so that there may be no misunderstanding whatever when this war is over." Mr. Myrick also is second vice president of the Mutuel Life Insurance Co. of New York.

Mr. Myrick added: "If we are to have the Four Freedoms outlined in the Atlantic Charter, we must have a fifth and basic freedom—freedom of enterprise—the God-given right to work, to save, to provide for one's family and for one's self. There can be no freedom of enterprise, however, under an oppressive tax policy which in effect kills the initiative and incentive . . ."

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Extra Dividend and Bonus

President Thomas J. Groom of the Bank of Commerce & Savings yesterday announced that directors had voted the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share and an extra dividend of $7.50 a share, payable December 31 to stockholders of record December 20.

Mr. Groom also announced that a bonus equal to one month's salary had been voted for employes prior to July 1, 1943, and smaller amounts for those employed since that date.

With the dividends announced yesterday, the bank will have paid $10 in regular dividends during 1943 and $10 in extras, the same amounts as distributed in 1942.

Named to IBA Committees

J. Clifford Folger of Washington, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, has announced appointment of three Washingtonians to IBA committees.

James P. Nolan, partner in the local investment house of Folger, Nolan & Co., was named a member of the Industrial Securities Committee of which Perry E. Hall of Morgan Stanley & Co. is chairman.

Richard P. Dunn, partner in the local house of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, has been named chairman of the IBA's Federal Taxation Committee. Edson B. Olds, president of the Washington Stock Exchange and a partner in Brown, Goodwyn & Olds, was named a member of the IBA Education Committee.

Another Bank Bonus

The Liberty National Bank of Washington already has distributed a Christmas bonus of one month's pay to all employes who have been with the institution more than a year and a half month's pay to those on the payroll for less than a year.

New Food Brokers' Aide

Watson Rogers has been appointed executive assistant to Secretary William E. Wolf in the Washington office of the National Food Brokers Association, it was announced yesterday by President H. Wayne Clarke. Mr. Rogers formerly was in the retail and wholesale grocery business and for the past five years has been secretary of the Oklahoma Retail Grocers Association.

Yule Bonus for A. & P.

John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. yesterday announced that approximately $1,250,000 would be distributed to the chain store concern's before Christmas as additional compensation. All A. & P. employes in Washington and elsewhere with six months or more of service will participate in the bonus. Similar compensation was paid last year.

Dividend Rate Retained

The Washington office of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark was notified yesterday that directors have voted to maintain the present dividend and interest scale to policyholders during 1944. H. Lawrence Choate, local branch manager, said this action will be good news to about 9000 Washingtonians who hold insurance aggregating 30 million with this company.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP).—A late rally reduced early losses which had run to about a cent in wheat and rye today, but the grain market generally gave a weak performance. Good rains in the Southwest and congressional moves to obtain more feed grain imports combined to produce buying interest. Trading was slow as selling pressure was only moderate.

There was some strength on short-covering late in the session and wheat closed ⅛ to ¾ lower. December 1.67⅞; oats were ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher. December 81¾; rye was unchanged to ¼ lower. December 1.18⅛@1.18¾, and barley was ¼ lower to ¼ higher. December 1.23.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

With a straight face, yet, George Marshall asked the Superintendent of Washington police to have his detectives keep an eye on Redskin football players who may be associating with gamblers . . . and not until just now did the side-splitting humor of the request dawn on us.

POVICH

Here's the owner of a professional football club who indicates it is a horrible thing to associate with gamblers, yet in his own business as a league owner he deals with two big-time bookmakers who operate clubs in the league and a third club-owner who is an admitted race track plunger.

We'd say it behooves the National Football League, and rapidly, to set its own house in order before it can conscientiously start any investigation of league players who might be hanging out with gamblers. If gamblers are acceptable as club owners, what, then, is so unthinkable about players being seen in the company of gamblers? We hate to keep asking questions, but we are of an incurably curious turn of mind.

"The integrity of pro football is questioned," said Marshall in a speech to his players, after admitting he called in the cops. If the football league had a boss of the stature of baseball's Judge Landis, he would know where to start protecting the game's integrity.

Players come into the league fresh out of college, free from any taint of scandal, and are immediately exposed to a betting element. The league ought to provide their young athletes some protection.

Elmer Layden, the high commissioner of football, is admired as one of Notre Dame's immortal Four Horsemen, but he has none of the judicious background or inquisatorial experience of Judge Landis. He is boss of pro football at a time when the league needs a strong man to curb the evils that always accompany a fast-growing professional sport.

Betting on the games by the public can never be stamped out, but the league owners could remove some of the temptations which unscrupulous gamblers are always holding out to professional athletes. They could pay their ball players better salaries to start with. The wages of some of the players leave them vulnerable to wiles of sure-thing gamblers.

Baseball's big 1919 scandal is traceable to the low salaries of the Black Sox and when he took charge of the game, Judge Landis immediately warned the club owners to pay their athletes better wages or they would be inviting more scandals. It behooves Layden to warn the football owners they must pay their athletes what the traffic will bear or he won't be responsible for what might happen.

Talk of "fix" was certain to follow the recent upset defeats of the Redskins. You hear it after almost every upset in professional sports, leaving the Garden after a fight, or the ball yards after certain games, but football men always discount "fix" talk after a pro game. "When any team in the pro league beats any other team, you should never be surprised," says Coach Steve Owen of the Giants.

The Yankees are admittedly the best team in big league baseball. But the fact is that they lose 40 per cent of their games. In a normal year it requires only a .600 average to win the pennant. That means the best club needs win only three games for every two lost. Why, then, any talk of "fix" when they lose? And why in football?

In the Giants'-Redskins game last Sunday, Bill Paschal broke away for the winning touchdown in the last four minutes by outrunning the same man who on two previous occasions had hauled him down in a clear field. But Paschal this time was under way faster and had a bigger lead. It was apparent that the Redskins were sitting on dynamite all afternoon, so why the talk of "fix."

In the absence of any evidence that business was done, the players are the unhappy victims of the Redskins' owner's request for police scrutiny of his athletes. They are put on the spot in an ill-guided attempt to put them under investigation. Unquestionably they can't be happy about it.

We were just thinking, for example, of a fellow like Wilbur Moore. He came to the Redskins out of the University of Minnesota. For years he has thrilled Washington fans with superlative earnestness of his play, his ballcarrying, his blocking and his pass catching. His play was always rough, but not dirty. He could be rough because he was rugged.

This season, Moore even began to rival Sammy Baugh as the Redskins' most valuable player. His injuries he shook off to stay in the lineup. He played despite one leg injury and stayed in there when his back was hurt. He invited bruises by his own recklessness on defense. Finally the complete weight of his injuries caught up with him. In the Giants' game they carried him off the field. He was in Doctors Hospital the other day, perhaps out for the season, with a painful blood clot on his leg. That's when he learned that the club's owner had asked police to keep an eye on the Redskin players.

Jockey Pannell Killed in Charles Town Spill

Gay Balko, a $21.80 Shot, Wins Charles Town's Third Race

Richard R. Nadeau's Gay Balko was too fast for the field in the third race at Charles Town and won handily. R. S. Wise's Juliette (on rail) ran second, and Bill K. (farthest on left), third. The horse under whip is George Furr's Dress Rock.

Rider's Wife Witness in 3-Horse Fall

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 9.—Apprentice Jockey Joseph W. Pannell was killed in a three-horse spill that marked today's eighth race. Crushed under the hoofs in the pile-up at the clubhouse turn, Pannell was rushed to the Charles Town Hospital and was pronounced dead on arrival. Two other jockeys escaped serious injuries. Jockey Ken Robertson suffered a bruised knee and Jockey Vincent Bracciale was slightly shaken up.

Pannell's recent bride witnessed the accident.

Patrol Judge Charles Gormley, stationed at the turn, said Pannell's mount, Five-o-Four, ran up on the heels of Janegri, stumbled and fell. Inmate, ridden by Bracciale, went down with Five-o-Four, and Purport, Robertson up, then crashed into the tangle of jockeys and horses. Jockey Danny Scocca, aboard Janegri, the favorite in the field of eight, said he did not feel Pannell's mount touch the heels of Janegri.

May Have Hit Rail

Five o' Four was in on the rail at the turn and witnesses said it was possible that the 8-year-old, owned by B. T. Pitts, might have struck the fence, causing the accident. Pannell failed to regain consciousness. His neck was broken. It was the first fatal accident at this track, where racing has been conducted since 1933.

Pannell was 19 and was from Avondale, Pa. He rode his first winner here last December 12 with Mrs. H. S. Clark's War Art. His father is a defense worker in Wilmington, Del. His mother is dead.

The young apprentice was the leading rider at the recent Marlboro meeting, where he rode 16 winners during the 10 days.

Pannell was to have faced the Maryland Racing Commission in a meeting at Baltimore tomorrow. He was to be the chief witness against Jockey M. Quinn, who was alleged to have made Pannell an offer of $150 to "pull" a horse at Marlboro.

The lightweight rider was formerly under contract to Arthur Hullcoat, but his contract later was obtained by J. H. Louchheim of Philadelphia and Pannell's career was being guided by Trainer J. Bowes Bond of Baltimore, who was not here today. His local agent was Winfield Landry, former steeplechase jockey.

The fatal race was won by Herod's Pilate, owned by T. W. Kirk, father of Carson Kirk, who rode. Herod's Pilate was in front all the way. Idle Scout, second at the finish, was forward of the horse that fell. Panegri finished third.

No Flash-in-the-Pan

Say What You Will, Leahy Swears by His T-Formation

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 9 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman has had his say about football's T-Formation—it's just a wartime flash-in-the-pan, he calls it—so now let's see what Frank Leahy, the Notre Dame coach, thinks about it.

Leahy, a leading exponent of the T style of attack, likes it very much. His team, using it, has just concluded a season in which it won nine of its ten games.

Said Leahy: "The players are completely sold on it and, after all, that's the real test. And our lowest total in any game this season was 14 points; not bad."

Leahy, however, would leave to others an answer to Bierman's crack as to the T being just a wartime fad.

"George Halas and Clark Shaughnessy can answer that," said Leahy. "They've forgotten more about the T by accident than I'll ever remember on purpose."

Halas used the T-Formation successfully with his Chicago Bears several years before the war and Shaughnessy, using it while coaching at Stanford, won the Pacific Coast title and a Rose Bowl game.

Leahy expressed reluctance to carry on an argument with Bierman or any other coach any place except on the football field but he pointed out that there might be a reason why Bierman, the former coach of Minnesota and the Iowa Seahawks, might not like T with his football.

In the fall of 1942 the Bierman coached Seahawks came to South Bend unbeaten and untied. They met up with the Notre Dame T and returned to Iowa City on the short end of a 28-to-0 score.

COACH LEAHY

Bierman made his remarks about the T formation this week while at Memphis, Tenn., where he was inspecting the athletic setups of the Memphis naval centers.

Terps Expect Trouble From Marine Quint

University of Maryland Coach Burton Shipley is looking for trouble tomorrow night when his young but fast Old Liners meet the Quantico Marines at College Park at 8 p. m. Shipley was warned when he saw Wednesday night's basketball scores: Quantico Marines, 47; Curtis Bay Coast Guard, 43.

The Coast Guard team last week defeated Bainbridge, and not that comparative scores mean anything, but Bainbridge defeated Washington College, 62-20, in its opening game.

Little is known of the personnel of the Marines' team, but it is reported to have an officers' team comprised of all former college courtmen. Last year it lost only to Georgetown.

Gallaudet will meet Loyola in Baltimore tomorrow night.

Two schedule changes were announced yesterday. Bolling Field canceled its game with Maryland originally set for January 7, while Navy's schedule came out with Catholic University as its opening opponent January 8.

Coast Guard Six Schedules 3 Games Here

As a result of negotiations completed yesterday, Washingtonians will get a taste of pro hockey within the next three weeks.

Owner Michael J. Uline and Arena Manager Howard K. Livingston announced that the Coast Guard Cutters of Curtis Bay, Md., have agreed to transfer three matches to Uline Arena.

On Tuesday night at 8:30 the Cutters will play host to the Montreal Royal Canadian Air Force, manned by a collection of former professional and amateur players.

A week from tonight, December 17, Pick Hines' H. M. S. York Naval Stars are to face the Coast Guardsmen at Uline's, while the Ottawa Commandos, Canadian Allen Cup champions, appear here on December 28.

The Cutters, the United States Hockey Association and Hockey League champions, are coached by Mel Harwood, former Eastern League and National Hockey League referee. Their stars include Frankie Brimsek, considered the greatest goalie in all hockey while with the Boston Bruins two years ago, and Alex Motter, Detroit Red Wings, and Johnny Marrucci, Chicago Blackhawks, defensemen.

Ossie Asmundsen and Billy Purcell, formerly of the Washington Lions, also are with the Coast Guardsmen.

Randle's Queen Wins Charles Town Feature

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 9.—Randle's Queen, owned by Raymond Soo of Washington, came through in the stretch drive here today to win the Wilson Ford Purse, best offering on the Thursday program. Jockey Sammy Palumbo, riding for the first day since he was taken ill early in the meeting, booted Randle's Queen home a half length in advance of H. H. Fausett's Grey Days. V. S. McClintock's Queen Minatoka was third and in front of J. K. Wynkoop's Well Allright. The last named was a disappointing favorite in the field of eight going over the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than six furlongs.

With most of the wagering centering on Well Allright, Jockey Carson Kirk up, Randle's Queen paid an $11.80 mutuel. The 6-year-old daughter of Espino and Glorify was clocked in 1:16 2/5, two seconds over the track record. The racing strip was fast and some 4000 customers saw the action.

Queen Minatoka set the early pace with Well Allright trying to get to the front, Grey Days and Randle's Queen were well placed on the backstretch. Well Allright then weakened. Grey Days went to Queen Minatoka and took command only to fall victim to the closing burst of speed supplied by the Palumbo-Randle's Queen combination.

The daily double paid $57.60 to holders of the 4 and 1 combination of Alan T. Clarke's Moalee, a $28.20 shot in the first race, and D. B. Wright's Shan Hill, a $4.80 proposition in the second event.

Jockey J. Tammaro was suspended five days for rough riding in the third race. Jockey A. Florio was suspended for three days for failure to keep his mount straight in the fifth.

Notes—The 3-year-old Coq-A-Lane has been purchased by Mrs. Evelyn Smith of Baltimore. Jockey Albert Vesselli passed out cigars yesterday. Mrs. Vesselli gave birth to a 6-pound girl in the Brunswick (Md.) Hospital. C. M. Feltner will conduct a paddock sale here at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. A dozen horses, including Appeal Agent, New Foundland and Oak Queen will go on the auction block. Gaby Haugh, president of the Maryland Racing Writers, and Jack Carpenter of the Baltimore News-Post, are visiting here. Jockey Sammy Palumbo swung into action again after an attack of grippe. Stanley Greene, jr., takes his horses into winter quarters at his farm near Leesburg, Va., after the meeting and will take up four yearlings for Flamingo Farms after the first of the year. He is one of our young up and coming trainers. WOL is broadcasting three races daily from here. Jockeys Leon Garrett and Ken Robertson were fined $25 each for failing to keep their mounts straight yesterday.

Former Pitcher Pleads Guilty In Rowe Swindle

Detroit, Dec. 9 (AP).—Ralph E. Baker, accused by Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, Philadelphia Phillies pitcher, of misappropriating $4592 in annuity premiums given him by Rowe, pleaded guilty today to a charge of larceny by conversion and was remanded to the probation department of Recorder's Court for investigation.

Bond of $1000 was continued by Recorder's Judge John J. Maher and sentencing was set for December 30. Judge Maher, in accepting Baker's plea of guilty, ordered a second count of embezzlement dropped.

Rowe, star of pennant-winning Detroit Tiger teams in the American League in 1935 and 1936, charged that he gave the money to Baker in 1941 and 1942 to apply on premiums of a $35,000 annuity Baker sold him. Payment to the company was not made, Rowe's complaint said.

Baker formerly pitched for St. Joseph and Wichita in the Western League.

Tommy Dewar Signs With Crescent Sextet

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—The Brooklyn Crescents, new member of the Eastern Hockey League, today announced the signing of Tommy Dewar, late of the New York Rangers, as player-coach. Hank Damore, 204-pound center of the disbanded New Haven club, also was added to the roster, bringing it to the 13-player limit.

The Crescents will play their first league game at Boston Sunday.

Zivic, Headed for Navy, Plans To Continue Career in Ring

Pittsburgh, Dec. 9 (AP).—Fritzie, last of the five fighting Zivic brothers, told the boxing world today he hasn't the "slightest idea" about retiring now and would keep right on fighting in 1944—"although most of it may be for Uncle Sam's Navy."

The 30-year-old former welterweight champ, who tackles tough Ossie Harris in the 179th bout of his career here Monday, announced he would begin his fourteenth year in the ring by meeting Jake LaMotta for the fourth time January 14 in Detroit.

(In Detroit, Matchmaker Nick Londes confirmed he had signed Zivic for the bout but said he hadn't closed with LaMotta yet.)

Zivic, who started making money with his fists in 1931, has won once and lost twice to LaMotta. All the decisions, however, were tighter than a drum.

Commenting on his plans, Fritzie said:

"I told them I'd have my best year in 1943—and I am. I think I can have even a better year in 1944."

Will Look Up Chochrane

The bout with Harris will be Fritzie's thirteenth this year and he said he has another with Steve Mamakos December 22 in Milwaukee. It has been his busiest and most lucrative years in the ring.

Zivic, father of three children, has been called by his draft board for his first physical examination, but he said he didn't expect final induction until "late in January or February." He expects to go into the Navy.

Always a fast guy with a word, he snapped:

"And maybe I won't be through fighting then. I'll look up Red Cochrane. I'd like to decide things with him. He beat and I beat him. Maybe we can fight for the championship of the fleet."

Cochrane, who lifted Fritzie's title after he won in from Henry Armstrong in 1940, is also in the Navy.

Pastor Cancels Barlund Bout

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Bob Pastor, leading heavyweight contender now in the Army, has called off his scheduled fight with Gunnar Barlund, Manager Jimmy Johnston said today.

Johnston said Pastor, now a boxing instructor at Fort Logan, did not feel that he was in proper fighting condition for the tilt with the Finn heavyweight, announced for December 17 at Denver.

Two Irish Players On Eastern Squad

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Fullback Jim Mello and Center Herbert Coleman of Frank Leahy's Notre Dame Irish were selected tonight by Coach Andy Kerr as members of the Eastern All-Star eleven that will oppose the pick of the West in the annual Shrine benefit game New Year's Day at San Francisco.

Only seven men remain to be picked for the squad of 22 which will report at Chicago December 17.

AMERICAN HOCKEY
Buffalo, 5; Providence, 3.
COLLEGE BASKETBALL
St. John's (Brooklyn), 69; West Point Field Artillery, 47.
Bainbridge N. T. S., 51; Mt. St. Mary's College, 32.

Glovers Enter Second Round

Eighteen boxing bouts will be offered Washingtonians at Turner's Arena tonight when the tenth annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament enters its second round at 8 o'clock.

Fifteen novice and three senior battles are on schedule, the seniors being scheduled to fire away for the first time.

Many of the novices who cleared first round competition last week will be back on tonight's card in an effort to gain the quarterfinals.

Prominent among the seniors will be Ray Hanbury, brother of Lew Hanbury and representing the Merrick Boys' Club, who engages Leonard Zuriga of Fort Meade.

Other senior numbers find the Apollo Club's Harry Ismer coupled with Johnny Binns, Washington Boys' Club, at 126 pounds, and George Espina, Merrick Club, matched with Maurice Evans, Bolling Field, at 147.

Second-round pairings:

NOVICE CLASS

135 pounds—Bill Goetling (unattached) vs. Frank Morony (Apollo A. Bears Again Beat Zollners, 51 to 49

Special Dispatch to The Post

Toledo, Dec. 9.—Zach Clayton's long shot from near mid-court with 30 seconds to play whipped through the cords and gave the Washington Bears a 51-49 triumph over the Fort Wayne Zollners and a sweep of the three-game Western series here tonight.

The Zollners took a 13-point lead early in the game and led 14-6 at the first quarter, 32-17 at halftime and 44-37 at the end of the third period before the Bears' finish proved too much for them.

Mad Anthony Wins At Fair Grounds

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Dec. 9 (AP).—Mad Anthony, shifty 2-year-old son of Pilate, owned by B. F. Whitaker, easily won the La Fourche purse, 6-furlong dash that topped the Fair Grounds program this afternoon. Apprentice Arnold Kirkland brought Mad Anthony from behind in a brilliant stretch dash.

Good in Papa's League, Too

Rookie Bill Paschal of the New York Giants, who is bad news to the Redskins, plays with his 2-month-old daughter, Diane, showing he is equally at home with a baby as with a pigskin in his arms. Paschal, 22, who has a medical discharge from the Army, ranks fourth among National Football League ball carriers. He and Mrs. Paschal have another child, Bill 3d. He'll be here Sunday

Two Montreal Forwards Traded to Rangers

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Montreal's league-leading Canadiens of the National Hockey League have sent two forwards to the cellar-bound New York Rangers in a continuation of a lend-lease deal for Phil Watson.

Johnny Mahaffey, a 25-year-old center who received a medical discharge from the Canadian army earlier in the week, and Fernand Gauthier, 23, a right winger who was injured in fall training after showing promise with Washington and Buffalo last year, are the new Rangers. A third player has been promised for later delivery.

By an early season agreement, Watson, although still New York property, was permitted to play Montreal home games. Now he is to be allowed to play all Canadiens' games except those in New York.

Blades to Pilot St. Paul Team

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 9 (AP).—Ray Blades, veteran of the St. Louis Cardinals' farm system and manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers' New Orleans Farm Club in 1942, signed a contract today to pilot the St. Paul American Association Baseball Club in 1944, President Walter Seeger announced.

Blades succeeds Francis (Salty) Parker who resigned in anticipation of entering the Army. He is 46 years old and is remembered for his fighting leadership in piloting two Columbus teams to association pennants in 1933-34. He managed New Orleans to first place in the second half of the Southern Association split season this year.

Perry to Face Cummings in Tuesday Bout

Taffy Cummings, British scrapper from the Royal Navy, was booked yesterday as the opponent for Aaron Perry, local Negro "Whiz Kid" and knockout ace, for one of the two eight-rounders on next Tuesday night's double wind-up show at Turner's Arena.

In the other half of the bill, Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, now on duty with Uncle Sam at Bolling Field, will seek his fourteenth straight pro victory in a battle with Charley Bennett of Baltimore, now making his home in Washington.

Cummings has had some stormy sessions here and in Baltimore. One of his best fights was against Charley Petro, now of the United States Navy.

The Cummings bout is the biggest test to date for Perry, who already has scored six kayoes in eight pro matches, and is being touted as a future champion by his manager, Harry Garsch. Perry is working out daily at the 12th st. YMCA along with Bennett, who only last Monday handed Eddie Kane an upset for the second straight time.

Buckey Walter Rests After Appendectomy

Philadelphia, Dec. 9 (AP).—Bucky Walters, ace pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds, was resting comfortably in St. Mary's Hospital today after having his appendix removed yesterday.

Dr. Patrick McCarthy, Walters' physician, said he would be out of the hospital in a few days.

Walters missed a trip to Alaska with Frank Frisch, manager of the Pirates; Danny Litwhiler and Stan Musial of the Cardinals, Frank Borowy of the Yanks, and Dixie Walker of the Dodgers. He decided he would rather have his appendix out and get it over, he said.

Live-Duck Decoys Planned During Season of 1944

A heavy increase in the duck and goose population may bring permission for hunters to use a limited number of live decoys in the 1944 season.

Chairman Robertson (Democrat) Virginia, of a Select Committee on Wildlife Conservation, said representatives of the Fish and Wildlife Service informed his group yesterday that because of better rainfall, well-planned refuges, restricted bag limits, and the like, the duck census had risen from about 27 million birds in 1933 to 150 million this year.

"In view of this marked increase," Robertson said the committee was told, "consideration will be given between now and the opening of the 1944 season to a suggestion that a limited number of live decoys be permitted for both duck and geese shooting."

Dorazio 20 Pounds Heavier Than Bolden

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP).—Nate Bolden, shifty Chicago Negro boxer, will face a weight disadvantage of 20 pounds when he engages Gus Dorazio of Philadelphia in one of four 10-round bouts in the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night. Bolden figures to scale 174. He believes his boxing skill will offset Dorazio's 194 pounds.

Harris, Moore Star In Panama Baseball

Panama (Canal Zone), Dec. 9 (AP). With Mickey Harris, former Boston Red Sox lefthander, pitching three innings, and Terry Moore, 1942 St. Louis Cardinal World Series hero, getting two hits in four times at bat, the Balboa Brewers handed the Cuban All-Stars a 6-1 pasting in a Canal Zone League game.

Dogs for Defense, Inc., To Get Show Proceeds

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—When the sixty-eighth annual show of the Westminster Kennel Club is held at Madison Square Garden on February 11 and 12, proceeds will go to Dogs for Defense, Inc.

John G. Bates, chairman of the show committee, has announced that nine specialty clubs will hold their shows under Westminster's auspices at the same time.

Maxie Berger To Drill Here Tomorrow

Maxie Berger, Canadian welterweight champion, who makes his Washington debut Monday night at Uline Arena, meeting Ernest (Cat) Robinson, hard-punching New York Negro, in the featured 10-rounder of Promoter Goldie Ahearn's semi-monthly fight card, will report here tomorrow and will work out in public at the Liberty A. C. gym, 419 9th st. nw., at 2:30 p. m.

The former world junior welterweight will leave New York chaperoned by Ray Arcel, famed handler and trainer, who will be in Berger's corner against the dangerous "Cat." Arcel notified Ahearn, who is confined to his home with a severe case of grippe, that Berger would arrive tomorrow in time for a workout and requested Ahearn to line up several capable sparring partners. Arcel said Berger would probably spar four or five rounds at top speed.

Meanwhile, Billy Speary notified Ahearn he would arrive Sunday in time to loosen-up for his important 10-round semifinal with Billy Banks, local Negro lightweight. Speary, who holds decisions over Harry Jeffra and Joey Archibald, was matched with Banks after Billy demanded a return shot at Vic Creelman, who scored after a close battle in their recent meeting here. Banks was promised a return bout with Creelman if he could get over the talented Speary and, if successful, next time against Creelman, would be matched with Lew Hanbury, who is now recovering from a fractured hand, received in a recent winning Madison Square Garden effort.

Tired Baugh To Be Saved For 'Punch'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman said yesterday he expected the New York Giants would "switch tactics" here Sunday, mixing a passing attack with the running of Bill Paschal and Ward Cuff in an attempt to catch the 'Skins off guard. "But we'll be ready for them," Dutch said, "and they'll find we have switched a few tactics, too."

The Giants gained 270 yards rushing in the 14-10 victory last Sunday in the Polo Grounds, 188 by Paschal and 80 by Ward Cuff. Tuffy Leemans picked up the other two yards. They completed two passes, one for 7 yards from Leemans to Cuff. The other was good only to the line of scrimmage.

Gone Over Pictures

Bergman has gone over pictures of the game twice with the squad, pointing out the shoddy defensive play which allowed Paschal and Cuff to pour through the line and he is confident with a few slight changes in the defensive setup, plus minor corrections, the Redskin line will plug the holes and force a change in the Giants' offensive. "Clean, hard tackling, even fundamental tackling, will stop them," Dutch said.

Paschal, who has scored 12 touchdowns in his rookie year and needs 91 yards against the Redskins to take over as the league's leading ground gainer, may throw a few passes but Emery Nix, who refused to call his own signal while running the Giants so effectively on the ground in their two-touchdown spree in the last half last week, is expected to match Sammy Baugh in the number of passes thrown.

With Wilbur Moore definitely out of the game, Bob Seymour's playing time a question due to a torn ligament and chipped bone in his right knee and Andy Farkas trying to fight off the flu, the Giants can almost forget the Redskins' running attack and concentrate on stopping Baugh and Understudy George Cafego.

Cafego will definitely start against the Giants in the backfield with Ray Hare, Frank Seno and Farkas, if the latter is in condition to play.

Moore, still confined to Doctor's Hospital with a blood clot on his leg and back injury, and Dick Farman, who is out for the remainder of the season with a back ailment, are the only players without a chance of playing against the Giants. Willie Wilkin, Farkas, Bob Masterson, Alex Piasecky and Al Fiorentino are all fighting the mild form of flu which has hit the city but all but Wilkin are on the road to recovery.

Confined to Movies

Yesterday morning's practice was confined to movies and a light workout, as the squad was in no condition for a rough midweek session. Center George Smith is below par physically and Ken Hayden will start with Bill Conkright, who has played only two minutes since he was acquired on waivers a month ago, in reserve.

Baugh, who has played more than 55 minutes in seven of the 'Skins nine games, more than he has ever played in six previous seasons, will alternate with Cafego in running the club. Bergman wants to keep Baugh as fresh as possible should Sam's passes be needed for a tying or winning touchdown in the fourth period. The Redskins need only a tie to clinch the Eastern Division title and a berth in the championship game December 19 with the Chicago Bears. Baugh's passes were needed last week, but Sammy was tired and the Giants blocked four straight aerials in an attempted Redskin comeback in the fourth period. Sam completed 9 of 12 passes in the first half, but dropped to 8 in 14 attempts in the second half.

According to our New York informant, the Giants' practice session yesterday morning had to do with passing, offensively and defensively. Giant Coach Steve Owen was satisfied with the way Giant defenders covered Baugh's pass receivers last Sunday, but the line gave Sammy too much time to get his throws away. Thus most of the defensive portion of the workout was confined to rushing the passer.

Will Walls, a Texas Christian teammate of Baugh, may start at right end for the Giants after missing the Brooklyn game and most of the Redskin game with injuries received at the hands of the Bears. Walls, a six-year man, is the Giants' best pass receiver and a good defensive end.

The Giants will arrive here late Saturday afternoon.

Parents Again Held to Blame For Juvenile Delinquency

The average juvenile criminal in Washington is a 14-year-old boy with a police record listing anywhere from one to several dozen offenses. His home life is a tragic compound of quarreling or deserted parents, improper diet, sordid living quarters and virtually no adult supervision.

This is the composite picture of the youthful delinquent drawn by police, Juvenile Court, education and church officials who have studied the growing problem in the Nation's Capital.

And any attempted solution which attacks the problem outside the home can be no more than superficial and "stop-gap" in effect, they agree.

The astonishing thing, one police officer declared yesterday is the "abnormal" indifference of so many fathers and mothers toward their children's criminal activities.

Gives Example

Fourteen young boys were picked up one night a month ago in one of the Georgetown neighborhoods, he related, and brought to precinct headquarters. The "usual" types of complaints were lodged against them—petty larceny, destruction of property, gang hoodlumism and street fighting.

Although it was late at night, only one father came to the station house to determine his son's whereabouts. Not a single parental inquiry was made about the remaining 13 boys, and patrolmen had to take them to their homes.

Highlighting the effects of such neglect, the officer said, is the fact that in the Georgetown area, of all crimes committed in the past two years approximately 90 per cent can be traced to children between 9 and 14 years old.

"Same Old Thing"

According to Dr. Stanley Gesell, U. S. Public Health Service psychiatrist assigned to the Juvenile Court, the common malefactor" among the 50-odd juvenile delinquents referred to him by probation officers in the two months he has worked at the court, has been "the same old thing—improper home environment."

"We work with the children, trying to straighten out in their minds the day-by-day problems they face. We have their parents come here whenever possible to discuss solutions with them. But I agree that when fathers and mothers refuse to cooperate, outside agencies are almost helpless to prevent development of their children into criminals," he said.

Guinea-Pig Thief Abandons Loot on Police Doorstep

William R. Anderson, who raises guinea pigs as a hobby at his home, 2419 Evarts st. ne., went to the police last Saturday and reported the theft of nine of his pets.

Police returned the call last night, taking with them seven of the guinea pigs that had come into their possession in a most unorthodox fashion—the thief left them on the steps of the Twelfth Precinct Station House.

The other two pigs are presumed to be missing in action.

Rabbi Gerstenfeld Indorses 'Share-Home-at-Yule' Plan

Indorsement of the "Share Your Home at Christmas" project came yesterday from Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation and a worker on the committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

Reminding that the Jewish Feast of Hanukah, or festival of the lights, which falls this month, is an occasion for giving gifts, similar to the Christmas celebration, Dr. Gerstenfeld said:

"At this festive season when we light the Hanukah Menorah, we must remember the light that courageously good people have lit in the hearts of others and have turned the tide against darkness.

"It would be in accord with that festival tradition that we make it another occasion for opening our homes to the newcomers of the community."

Meanwhile, an appeal has come to the Federation of Churches Defense Commission to find Christmas Day hospitality for 250 WAVES stationed in West Potomac Park barracks.

Donald F. Bautz, director of the defense commission, will go to Arlington Farms dormitories today to confer with the Federation Recreation Committee on the progress of the Christmas project. The committee represents 50 Federal agencies and is headed by Marshall Stalley. Application blanks for prospective Christmas Day dinner guests will be left at the "dorms."

The "share your home at Christmas" idea is being conducted again this year by the Defense Commission, with the aid of The Washington Post and Government agencies.

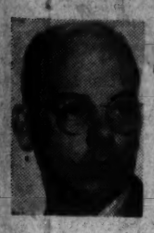
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Per Diems Won't Get Yule Time-and-a-Half

Some 50,000 per diem employes here will be paid straight time for Christmas Saturday. Comptroller General Lindsey Warren told the War Department yesterday that the regular time-and-a-half couldn't be paid. His decision also will apply to Government Printing Office, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Navy Yard, and the Alexandria Torpedo Plant among other agencies. About a third of Uncle Sam's employes are classified as per diems. Earlier the Comptroller General implied that the per diems couldn't be paid for Christmas since it fell on Saturday and it wasn't a regular workday. The per diems are on a 48-hour week like other Federal workers, but they are paid time-and-a-half for Saturday work. The comptroller's decision undoubtedly will stop Congress from taking up the matter.



The next War Department project the Truman Committee will investigate is a half-a-billion-dollar affair in the State of Washington. The department purchased about 200,000 acres of land for it and it's reported to be one of the largest single projects that's to be built from scratch in the Nation's history. But the department is doing all it can to throw secrecy barriers in Truman's path and the inquiry is being delayed . . . John F. O'Malley, former official at War Foods, soon will be back on Broadway with a leading part in Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Storm operation." . . . Two more top-flight executives from the Railroad Retirement Board will be given administrative jobs in Office of Price Administration. They are Chester Weldon and B. J. Oliver, who moved to Chicago with RRB last year.

Meritorious in-grade promotions have been given to Sherwood Hinds and Robert M. Ross at War Manpower Commission for developing a new and more economical method of publishing a supplement to the dictionary of occupational titles. . . . Clerk jobs are open in the Government. Apply at the Civil Service Commission. . . . A check at War Productino Board yesterday showed the epidemic of "flu" to be subsiding. On Monday 87 employes were sent home; 44 on Tuesday; 33 on Wednesday and around 25 yesterday. However, an unusually large number of employes have been absent all week. This is one period when officials in all agencies are insisting that employes take leave if they feel out of sorts.

Softening the Blow

Hereafter, if the Internal Revenue Bureau mails you for an unexpected tax payment it'll do it in a "friendly and tactful manner." Commissioner Robert Hannegan yesterday told the employes to stop writing curt and peremptory letters. He banned the use of the cold "dear sir" and ordered the use of the person's name. He also substituted the use of "very truly yours" instead of respectfully . . . If you're one of the many Fedeal workes who would like to be invited out to a family home for Christmas dinner be sure and make application early at your personnel office. Girls in the various dormitories can make applications with the directors.

Representative Gathings of Arkansas has come up with some ideas on the salaries of Federal employes which are thought-provoking. He believes, like many others, that the Classification Act is out of date and he has introduced a bill which would raise the salaries of those who prove to be efficient. But his way of measuring efficiency would be to tell each supervisor: "Reduce your personnel by at least 15 per cent and you'll be given a grade raise." His plan, if strictly followed, would give pay raises to employes in agencies that are decreasing and where a full staff isn't needed, while the supervisor in a growing agency would be penalized.

But the purpose behind Gathing's bill is excellent. The legislator says the present system of pay raises is based on the theory that the employe must build a large organization before his pay can be raised and no matter how many times that theory is denied it's a fact that it works out that way in practice all too often. Gathings points to the words "large office" that appears many times in the Classification Act and he believes the Federal Government will never be cut down unless there is a real incentive for reduction and a lot of people will agree with him. He'd like to see the heads of agencies initiate the cuts and he'd reward them and the bureau and section chiefs under them with higher salaries for lopping off employes. Gathings is correct; the administrators and the employes alike need an incentive to reduce and an incentive that would be backed up by Congress.

The Government Girl Club is holding a war-stamp dance Monday night at the Shoreham. Admission will be by war stamps only and you'll be able to make purchases at the door. The girls hope to raise enough money to buy a jeep. Senators Capper, Hatch and Guffey have been invited. A guest will be Philip Morris' Johnny, who'll call out the dances . . . The Museum of Modern Art of New York has a display of ancient and modern air maps in the Commerce Department auditorium.

Policeman Says Maghan Wasn'tDrunk

The first punch was thrown in Municipal Court yesterday in the battle of Robert J. Maghan, suspended policeman, to prove his arrest on a charge of drunkenness was a frameup, when a fellow officer testified Maghan was not intoxicated an hour and a half after the arrest.

Maghan, who could have forfeited $10 on the charge, chose to fight the case, and it promises to be the longest trial for drunkenness ever held here.

Maghan previously had sued officials of the Police Department and the local government for $150,000, charging he was illegally demoted from detective sergeant to private prior to his arrest and suspension.

Trial Hasn't Begun

The drunk case hasn't even reached the trial stage, at present merely being argument on a motion by Maghan to quash the information on which the arrest was made.

Before the prosecution had a chance to present its case, James J. Laughlin, defense attorney, put on the stand Maghan and Precinct Detective Joseph Loughran.

"Did you hear any of the officers tell Maghan he was under arrest?" asked Laughlin.

"No, I did not," Loughran replied.

"In your opinion, was Maghan drunk?"

"No," stated Loughran emphatically.

Loughran said he was on his way to church at 6:45 a. m., Sunday, December 5, when he saw a parked scout car at Banks and M sts. nw. He said he offered to take Maghan to the precinct station and not until after he spoke to officers there did he learn Maghan had been arrested.

Charged with being drunk, Maghan was arrested at 5:30 the same morning, on a parking lot where police said he was drunk on the front seat of his automobile. Maghan said he was asleep, that he had been worried over illness in his own family. He admitted there was a bottle of Scotch whisky in the car.

Under cross-examination, the former detective said he was reluctant to enter the police station or to talk to his superior officers, but finally relinquished his service revolver to other policemen and was placed in a cell.

The following day, Maghan was suspended until his case is disposed of.

Today, Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas is to present witnesses in answer to the motion to quash the information. The trial is before Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Holiday Meal Limit Fixed At '42 Price

Prices for holiday meals already established in 1942 may be charged by Washington restaurants this year, local OPA officials said yesterday.

If, in 1942, a restaurant operator had set up his holiday meal price as $1 about a normal charge, he can do the same this year. However, he will not be allowed to advance the price any higher.

In Maryland, OPA has ruled that prices may not go above the 1943 level and in no case more than 10 per cent over those charged on December 31, 1942.

Should a Maryland restaurant wish to tack on an additional price to cover the cost of entertainment which formerly was not provided, permission has to be obtained from the OPA. Curtailment in food or entertainment should be reflected in lower prices, OPA said.

Alice Padgett to Direct Survey Of District Men Facing Draft

NEW DISTRICT DRAFT AIDE. Miss Alice Padgett, assistant professor of social work at Catholic University yesterday was sworn in as aide to Director William Leahy and will organize new program tracing social and medical history of potential inductees.

Miss Alice Padgett, assistant professor of social work at Catholic University, yesterday was sworn in by D. C. Selective Service Director William F. Leahy to recruit 300 trained social workers for proposed medical and social surveys of men facing the draft.

Miss Padgett, first woman to assume an administrative position with Selective Service, will assist in developing the plan, ordered by National Selective Service, to furnish induction stations with adequate medical, social and educational histories of registrants. Better classification of potential draftees is expected.

Leahy said he hoped the survey would be in operation by the first of the year, since information obtained in case histories might prove some 4-Fs were actually fit for service and thus cut down the drafting of fathers.

Miss Padgett, president of the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers, will call upon casework agencies to loan some of their social workers on office time to supplement the proposed corps of volunteers.

Daylight Air-Raid Test Here Leaves Officials Well Pleased

The first afternoon air raid test of the year, which caught thousands of Christmas shoppers unaware on downtown streets, yesterday at 2:13 p. m., was "unusually well-observed," District civilian defense officials declared last night.

Adding a touch of front-line reality were White House soldiers, who immediately manned fox holes and took up positions behind buildings and trees, with only machine gun nozzles protruding. Others scattered a block each way, taking up posts previously assigned. Antiaircraft gunners rushed to their guns.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, in charge of civilian defense, revealed that more wardens and auxiliary policemen participated in the test than ever before. An especially large turnout of officials in the command center in Municipal Center was also reported.

Indications from nearby counties were that their control centers were also well-manned, Commissioner J. Russell Young said.

The test was scheduled by the Army on the recommendation of the District Commissioners, since no practice raids had been staged for almost two months. Statistically, it was the District's twenty-seventh test in the past two years, of which nine were daytime tests.

The yellow warning signal was flashed to civilian defense workers, Police and Fire Departments at 1:45 p. m., but the public didn't hear the blue alert until 2:13 p. m. Traffic continued until 2:33 p. m., when the red signal (fluctuating blasts) sent pedestrians and taxi, bus and streetcar passengers into shelter for 10 minutes.

In the downtown area a few straggling violations were noted, even a few minutes before the second blue was sounded (at 2:43 p. m.), but no official reports have been made of nonobservance. The all-clear came at 2:58 p. m.

Two girls were seen scurrying across Union Station Plaza with suitcases during the red signal, and even the wardens who chased them couldn't discourage their rush for a train. A young woman whose appointment at civilian defense headquarters coincided with the test called to explain that she would be late. She was peremptorily told to refrain from phoning until the test was over.

Meanwhile, the Maryland Council of Defense announced that no air-raid tests would be called in that State during the holiday season.

Records Show Drop in Cafe Dirt Violations

Washington's food establishments are scouring their premises of dangerous dirt in salutary fashion, it was revealed yesterday when officials reported violations of health regulations had dropped from 48 a week to 4.

The decrease has been achieved in a steady trend, it was said; the last week of July 48 proprietors paid fines and forfeitures amounting to $1200; the last week in September, 15 paid $625; the last week in October 11 cases paid $375; and in the week ending December 4, 4 paid $175.

When wartime manpower shortages caused large turnovers in food establishments, violations mounted.

Reductions followed a Post campaign last summer, and most proprietors responded to the educational campaign, Health Officer George C. Ruhland said yesterday.

However, he said there were some who didn't care and had to be allowed to tell it to the courts. The number of these offenders has been reduced since personal court appearances in addition to payment of fines have been required, according to Dr. Ruhland.

Under the present system, first offenders are required to attend weekly Health Department conferences where they are shown proper methods of sterilizing utensils and otherwise maintaining their premises lawfully. Second offenders must go to court.

The department now has 32 inspectors who keep watch over the city's 6000 eating establishments.

The Old Changeth

President Will Not Light '43 Yule Tree

For the first time in 21 years, the annual ceremony of having the national community Christmas tree lighted by the President will be abandoned this year, it was announced yesterday.

Since 1922 it has been customary for the brilliantly lighted tree, the symbol of the yule season, to be lighted by the President, and in 1933 President Roosevelt inaugurated the custom of having the tree on the south lawn of the White House.

District Commissioner John Russell Young suggested that the custom be held in abeyance this year in order to save gasoline and as the result of transportation difficulties. The suggestion was adopted at the White House, it was announced yesterday.

However, President Roosevelt will give his customary Christmas Eve message over the radio to the Nation.

Two Plead Guilty Under Mann Act In Case of Girl, 18

Two persons pleaded guilty yesterday in District Court to violating the Mann Act by transporting an 18-year-old girl from Roanoke, Va.

The defendants were Mrs. Julia E. Largen, 27, who admitted one charge, and Ewell G. Tasker, 29, who pleaded guilty to three charges. A third defendant, Robert L. Wheeling, jr., 26, pleaded guilty earlier and awaits sentence.

Maximum penalty is 20 months to five years imprisonment on each charge. Justice Matthew F. McGuire will impose sentence.

Cold Victims Again Urged To Stay Home

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday reemphasized his request that all persons with cold symptoms stay at home to avoid spreading infection.

In the face of reduced medical personnel, it is unfair to expose others, he said.

The Health Department requested teachers to dismiss children promptly from school if they show signs of a cold, and parents to keep youngsters at home if they have cold symptoms.

Dr. Ruhland asked local radio stations and newspapers to circulate the following advice in an effort to curb the local epidemic:

Do not send children to school if they show symptoms of influenza; keep ill persons at home until they are fully recovered; segregate the ill and the well at home; wash hands thoroughly before each meal; clean dishes thoroughly; avoid crowded places.

Advice to Restaurants

Managers of public eating places were urged to sterilize glasses and eating utensils scrupulously, and to have food handlers wash their hands frequently with soap and running water.

Meanwhile absence reports in the public schools indicated an increase in the number of cases to a total of about 8000 so far, Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Division of Preventable Diseases, said. An analysis of absence reports up to Tuesday, December 7, indicated absence of about 7 per cent of the student body, a total of about 6000 to 7000.

Absence reports indicated that elementary schools were hardest hit. Out of 900 elementary school teachers, 150 were on sick lists yesterday. In a survey of 11,413 pupils in 30 elementary schools, more than 2900 were sick.

Although these figures show 25 per cent absent, school officials pointed out that this was for all causes, not just colds.

Warning to Schools

Supt. Robert L. Haycock said that Health Department requests had been transmitted to all elementary schools by telephone and to those in charge of senior and junior high schools.

The weekly dance held at the Bureau of Engraving for servicemen, sponsored by the District Department of Recreation and the Women's Battalion each Friday night will be postponed until next Friday.

Meanwhile, more than 5000 cases of influenza have been reported to the Alexandria Health Department since December 1, it was learned yesterday. Dr. William Arkell Browne, city health officer, described the situation as "serious" but warned against "hysteria."

Thomas C. Williams, superintendent of schools, said that Alexandria's schools will not be closed, although he admitted an increase of more than 600 absences over two weeks ago.

Kramer School Dedicatory Rites Are Held

Stephen Elliott Kramer Junior High School, at 17th and Q sts. se., in operation since April of this year, was officially dedicated last night in ceremonies in the school auditorium.

Built to relieve overcrowded conditions at Anacostia High School, which is but a block away, Kramer is running at capacity with 1400 pupils and a staff of 48 teachers. John M. Riecks is principal of the school.

Col. Charles W. Kutz, engineer Commissioner, in presenting a golden key as a token for the school to Dr. Robert A. Maurer, vice president of the Board of Education, recalled that at one time work on the school was interrupted by the War Production Board.

Kutz also recalled that only the intervention of the school board succeeded in convincing the WPB to let the building be used for school purposes instead of a Federal office building after approval had been gained to finish construction of the three-story brick structure.

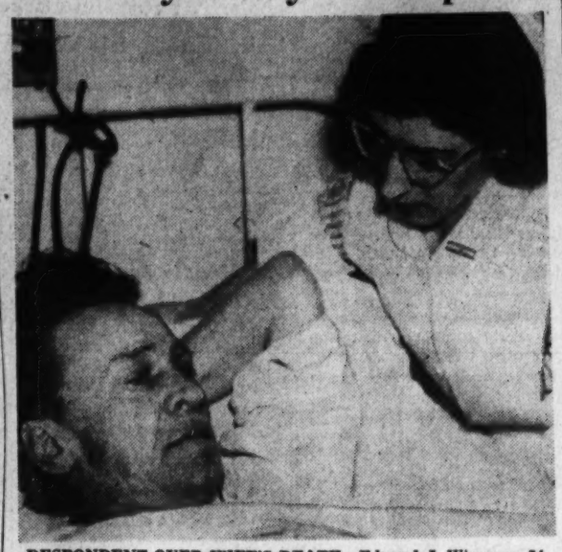
Mrs. Stephen Elliott Kramer, widow of the assistant superintendent of schools for whom the new school is named, was guest of honor and heard manifold praise for her husband by the speakers of the evening.

They included, besides Colonel Kutz, Dr. Maurer, and Riecks, Robert L. Haycock, superintendent of schools; Lawson J. Cantrell assistant superintendent of schools; Mrs. William E. Linden, president, Kramer Parent-Teacher Association; Adelbert W. Lee, member, Board of Education, and Henry W. Draper, supervising principal, First Division.

The invocation was said by the Rev. Allan F. Poore, and the Rev. Joseph V. Buckley pronounced the benediction.

The school orchestra and major chorus presented a program of music. More than 300 persons attended the ceremony.

Landlord Accused in Death Caused by Leaky Gas Pipe



DESPONDENT OVER WIFE'S DEATH—Edward J. Wissman, 54, who managed to survive effects of the leaking gas, recuperates at Gallinger Hospital. The widower is consoled by his nurse, Helen Rizzo

Andrew J. Watts, 65-year-old rooming house operator, was charged with manslaughter and held without bail at the District Jail last night in connection with the gas death of Mrs. Margaret C. Wissman, 42, a tenant at 224 G st. nw.

He was ordered held by a coroner's jury at an inquest yesterday when the panel decided he was "criminally negligent." Escaping illuminating gas killed Mrs. Wissman and felled her husband, Edward J. Wissman, 54, at their apartment last Monday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald revealed that Watts admitted installing gas pipes for a cooking plate in the Wissmans' rooms without obtaining a permit. Detectives testified their investigation disclosed the gas escaped from a crack in a section of water pipe which was used instead of gas piping.

The couple was found unconscious by Mrs. Helen Whitaker, another roomer, at the G st. address. They were taken to Freedmen's Hospital, where Mrs. Wissman was pronounced dead.

Wissman, an employe of the Diamond Cab Co., was later transferred to Gallinger Hospital. He was reported recovering last night though he was heartbroken over his wife's death. Physicians said "he sobs constantly."

The couple had been living at the G st. rooming house since early summer with their daughter, Mrs. Catherine Cassio, 32. Mrs. Cassio was out buying groceries at the time the fatal accident occurred.

Watts, a Spanish-American War veteran, lives in a basement room in the house.

Mason Studies All Legal Items As Part of Commission Duties

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Commissioner Guy Mason, like his colleague, John Russell Young, is a veteran newspaperman.

Unlike Young, he was available to this reporter to tell his own story about his work.

GUY MASON

On the fourth day of this District Building sojourn, his private secretary, Anne W. Davidge, said she thought he was in his office.

This is Commissioner Mason's own account of a "typical day" of service to the people of Washington:

"I usually arrive about 9 a. m. and leave about 5:30 p. m. There is a great deal of mail to be opened and read. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays I sit in on board meetings with the other Commissioners.

"Afternoons I am in conference with health and welfare officials. I also have all legal matters referred to me by the other Commissioners. I study these matters before passing them on to Corporation Counsel Keech.

Active in Service

"Most of Monday, after board meetings, and part of Tuesday, I receive visitors who want to take up District matters. When Congress is in session, I am in constant attendance on legislation affecting the District.

"I try to get to all my departments three or four times every year."

The Commissioner was asked if he could be a little more detailed in his description of his work.

He said, "Well, it's like I said. There is something doing all the time. It's hard to say just what and when."

Mason was born in Pierston, Ind., in 1880. He was raised and educated in Elizabeth, N. J., and Middleton, N. Y. Two years ago, President Roosevelt appointed him to the Commissionership.

First Named by Wilson

His first taste of a bigger life—that of serving the public—was given him by Woodrow Wilson in an appointment to the Union Station Plaza Commission. This was followed by serving as secretary of the Woodrow Wilson Independent League in 1916. In 1913, he met Franklin D. Roosevelt when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

While he was a White House correspondent for International News Service, he studied law and later finished his course at National University. He was practicing law when appointed a Commissioner.

Since his appointment as Commissioner, Mason said, he has sponsored all war recreation activities in the District. He set up three recreational structures, including the schools, the National Capital Park Commission and the public playgrounds. He brought the three phases together under the District Recreation Board.

Under Fire Recently

Commissioner Mason's most important responsibility, in war-crowded Washington, is supervision of the Health Department. It was in this connection that his office was under severe congressional and public scrutiny during the recent Gallinger Hospital investigation.

Mason has since drawn up a new organization chart for the hospital and from his talk one gets the impression that there'll be no more scandals at Gallinger.

This, then, is Guy Mason, who, like the other civilian Commissioner, John Russell Young, occupies an office in the District Building, furnished with a Frigidaire, a bathroom and a big wood-burning fireplace.

Mahon Resigns From District Subcommittee

Representative Mahon (Democrat) of Texas resigned yesterday as chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee for the District of Columbia, saying he needs more time to devote to other vital subcommittees.

"I believe we are entering an era of good feeling between Congress and the District," he said. "There is little friction between the two, and excellent cooperation."

He served on the District Appropriations subcommittee for five years, two of them as chairman. He also is a member of the War Department, Treasury, and the Post-office subcommittees.

District Commissioners expressed appreciation of Chairman Mahon's efforts on the city's behalf.

City News In Brief

A large plaque—a likeness of Maj. Edward J. Kelly burned out of wood—was presented to Inspector Harvey Callahan yesterday by the Sentinel Club at a testimonial ceremony.

Inspector Callahan received the plaque for Major Kelly, who was unable to attend because of illness. The plaque was made by Andrew Jackson, who is a District fireman.

The Sentinel Club consists of the Negro policemen and firemen in the District. Both the Metropolitan Police Band and the octette of the Northeast Choral Society presented music for the occasion.

W. Va. Society to Dance

A Christmas dance will be given by the West Virginia Society of Washington tonight at 10 o'clock in the Shoreham Hotel, marking the opening of the organization's Christmas season.

Shoes, Garments Stolen

Three cartons of women's low-heeled shoes and a carton of cotton underwear were reported stolen from an Eagle Transfer Co. truck which was parked alongside the warehouse at 4th and E sts. sw. yesterday. Lawrence M. Gates, manager of the transfer company, said the shoes were consigned to Jelleff's. Total value was placed at $150.

5 D.C. Groups Back Home Rule Bill

By Anne Hagner

Representatives of five civic organization appeared yesterday before a Senate District Subcommittee to voice their approval of the McCarran bill granting home-rule to Washington residents.

Those who expressed views were: Kenneth P. Armstrong, Burroughs Citizens Association; Sparrel A. Wood, Citizens' Forum of Columbia Heights; Samuel Levine, National Lawyers Guild; Mrs. M. K. Manoukian, Young Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. Richard Boke, League of Women Shoppers.

Armstrong devoted most of his testimony to rebuttal of views expressed earlier in the hearings by Joseph C. McGarraghy, Washington Board of Trade spokesman, whose opposition to the McCarran measure included declarations that "no real cross-section of a vote could be obtained in the District because many of its residents vote in other States."

Could Apply to Any State

McCarran commented: "The Board of Trade's argument could be made about every State in the Union now because of increasing shifts in population. Quite a proportion of my State comes and goes and makes no protest of voting there."

A flurry of excitement croped up in the midst of Armstrong's recital as a visitor, who gave his name as W. H. Loder, jumped to his feet and makes no pretext of voting to voting un-American? If many of us think that the present commission form of government is efficient, do you consider it un-American for us to oppose local elections?"

"I call it un-American to oppose the people's right to govern themselves!" Armstrong retorted.

Some Favor Commission

"There is quite a group that likes the Board of Commissioners just as it is," Loder continued. "If you call the District Building to have a dead dog removed from the street, a truck comes along and removes him in 20 minutes to an hour. You can't deny that for efficiency."

"I deny it vigorously," replied another prospective witness, but McCarran stilled the brief storm by calling for order.

Mrs. Manoukian, who said she represented the YWCA staff and not its board, told the subcommittee she had a son in the service and entered a plea to "restore the District franchise so that when the boys come back they can enjoy the privileges of democracy they're fighting for." She and her coworkers ask prompt passage of the McCarran bill.

Wood, of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, stated that he felt the hearings this week are indicative of the need for change in District administration.

Hardship on Lawmakers

"The first day two witnesses were heard and the chairman had to adjourn because of another meeting. The same was true yesterday (Wednesday). This is no criticism of the members of the subcommittee, for naturally their own constituents are due the first consideration," he said.

"It goes farther than that, Mr. Wood," agreed Senator McCarran. "Senator Overton and I had to go to the Appropriations Committee because there are national demands for maintenance through appropriations. The call of one's State is only part of it—there is always the national call."

"Exactly," Wood replied. "Running the District of Columbia works a hardship on the members of both the Senate and House District Committees, and a hardship on their constituents in their home States."

He added that his organization wholeheartedly recommends passage of the bill "because it is a step in the right direction." The forum also favors national representation, he said.

"The District has the most undemocratic system of administration in the entire United States," Wood asserted. "It fails to give the people their natural right of a voice in their own governmental affairs."

He joined with other civic groups in recommending:

1. Calling the elected Commissioners councilmen;
2. Reduction of the $8000 annual salary recommended in the bill, with a suggestion of $2000;
3. Appointment of the city manager without term;
4. Removal of the city manager by the board for cause rather than misconduct.

Levine's statement said: "In times of peace it was anomalous that the Capital . . . should be denied the opportunity of self-government. In time of war this flaw in our democratic armor is more than an anomaly; it is a serious weakness which can be used by Axis propagandists to discredit the United Nations and their struggle for the four freedoms. The McCarran bill must, therefore, be enacted now."

Mrs. Boke's report, read into the record, also favored immediate passage of the bill. The hearings will continue Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

RailwayPoliceman Cleared inShooting

Clarence R. Burke, 48, of 719 North Carolina ave. se. was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in the death of Norman Elmore, Negro, 25, of the first block of K st. ne.

Elmore was killed when Burke's gun went off after the two struggled on the railroad tracks at New Jersey ave. and D st. se. The jury decided that the gun was accidentally discharged.

Burke, who is a railroad policeman, told police, following the accident, that Elmore had tried to get his gun away from him after he had ordered the man off the tracks.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Per Diems Won't Get Yule Time-and-a-Half

Some 50,000 per diem employes here will be paid straight time for Christmas Saturday. Comptroller General Lindsey Warren told the War Department yesterday that the regular time-and-a-half couldn't be paid. His decision also will apply to Government Printing Office, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Navy Yard, and the Alexandria Torpedo Plant among other agencies. About a third of Uncle Sam's employes are classified as per diems. Earlier the Comptroller General implied that the per diems couldn't be paid for Christmas since it fell on Saturday and it wasn't a regular workday. The per diems are on a 48-hour week like other Federal workers, but they are paid time-and-a-half for Saturday work. The comptroller's decision undoubtedly will stop Congress from taking up the matter.

The next War Department project the Truman Committee will investigate is a half-a-billion-dollar affair in the State of Washington. The department purchased about 200,000 acres of land for it and it's reported to be one of the largest single projects that's to be built from scratch in the Nation's history. But the department is doing all it can to throw secrecy barriers in Truman's path and the inquiry is being delayed . . . John F. O'Malley, former official at War Foods, soon will be back on Broadway with a leading part in Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Storm operation." . . . Two more top-flight executives from the Railroad Retirement Board will be given administrative jobs in Office of Price Administration. They are Chester Weldon and B. J. Oliver, who moved to Chicago with RRB last year.

Meritorious in-grade promotions have been given to Sherwood Hinds and Robert M. Ross at War Manpower Commission for developing a new and more economical method of publishing a supplement to the dictionary of occupational titles. . . . Clerk jobs are open in the Government. Apply at the Civil Service Commission. . . . A check at War Productino Board yesterday showed the epidemic of "flu" to be subsiding. On Monday 87 employes were sent home; 44 on Tuesday; 33 on Wednesday and around 25 yesterday. However, an unusually large number of employes have been absent all week. This is one period when officials in all agencies are insisting that employes take leave if they feel out of sorts.

Softening the Blow

Hereafter, if the Internal Revenue Bureau mails you for an unexpected tax payment it'll do it in a "friendly and tactful manner." Commissioner Robert Hannegan yesterday told the employes to stop writing curt and peremptory letters. He banned the use of the cold "dear sir" and ordered the use of the person's name. He also substituted the use of "very truly yours" instead of respectfully . . . If you're one of the many Federal workes who would like to be invited out to a family home for Christmas dinner be sure and make application early at your personnel office. Girls in the various dormitories can make applications with the directors.

Representative Gathings of Arkansas has come up with some ideas on the salaries of Federal employes which are thought-provoking. He believes, like many others, that the Classification Act is out of date and he has introduced a bill which would raise the salaries of those who prove to be efficient. But his way of measuring efficiency would be to tell each supervisor: "Reduce your personnel by at least 15 per cent and you'll be given a grade raise." His plan, if strictly followed, would give pay raises to employes in agencies that are decreasing and where a full staff isn't needed, while the supervisor in a growing agency would be penalized.

But the purpose behind Gathing's bill is excellent. The legislator says the present system of pay raises is based on the theory that the employe must build a large organization before his pay can be raised and no matter how many times that theory is denied it's a fact that it works out that way in practice all too often. Gathings points to the words "large office" that appears many times in the Classification Act and he believes the Federal Government will never be cut down unless there is a real incentive for reduction and a lot of people will agree with him. He'd like to see the heads of agencies initiate the cuts and he'd reward them and the bureau and section chiefs under them with higher salaries for lopping off employes. Gathings is correct; the administrators and the employes alike need an incentive to reduce and an incentive that would be backed up by Congress.

The Government Girl Club is holding a war-stamp dance Monday night at the Shoreham. Admission will be by war stamps only and you'll be able to make purchasess at the door. The girls hope to raise enough money to buy a jeep. Senators Capper, Hatch and Guffey have been invited. A guest will be Philip Morris' Johnny, who'll call out the dances . . . The Museum of Modern Art of New York has a display of ancient and modern air maps in the Commerce Department auditorium.

Policeman Says Maghan Wasn't Drunk

The first punch was thrown in Municipal Court yesterday in the battle of Robert J. Maghan, suspended policeman, to prove his arrest on a charge of drunkenness was a frameup, when a fellow officer testified Maghan was not intoxicated an hour and a half after the arrest.

Maghan, who could have forfeited $10 on the charge, chose to fight the case, and it promises to be the longest trial for drunkenness ever held here.

Maghan previously had sued officials of the Police Department and the local government for $150,000, charging he was illegally demoted from detective sergeant to private prior to his arrest and suspension.

Trial Hasn't Begun

The drunk case hasn't even reached the trial stage, at present merely being argument on a motion by Maghan to quash the information on which the arrest was made.

Before the prosecution had a chance to present its case, James J. Laughlin, defense attorney, put on the stand Maghan and Precinct Detective Joseph Loughran.

"Did you hear any of the officers tell Maghan he was under arrest?" asked Laughlin.

"No, I did not," Loughran replied.

"In your opinion, was Maghan drunk?"

"No," stated Loughran emphatically.

Loughran said he was on his way to church at 6:45 a. m., Sunday, December 5, when he saw a parked scout car at Banks and M sts. nw. He said he offered to take Maghan to the precinct station and not until after he spoke to officers there did he learn Maghan had been arrested.

Charged with being drunk, Maghan was arrested at 5:30 the same morning, on a parking lot where police said he was drunk on the front seat of his automobile. Maghan said he was asleep, that he had been worried over illness in his own family. He admitted there was a bottle of Scotch whisky in the car.

Under cross-examination, the former detective said he was reluctant to enter the police station or to talk to his superior officers, but finally relinquished his service revolver to other policemen and was placed in a cell.

The following day, Maghan was suspended until his case is disposed of.

Today, Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas is to present witnesses in answer to the motion to quash the information. The trial is before Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

D. C. Woman Dies; Was in Traffic Crash

D. C. traffic deaths this year . . 86
Deaths this date last year 101
District total last year 108

Injured in a trolley-automobile crash here last Monday, Mrs. Mary E. Roat, 70, of 316 Maryland ave. ne., died at Alexandria Hospital at 10:15 a. m. yesterday.

Physicians said she was treated for cuts to her head and an injury to her side. An autopsy will be performed this morning to determine whether the injuries were responsible for her death.

Mrs. Roat was riding in a car driven by James L. Kelly, jr., 43, of 2515 Duke st., Alexandria, who was taking her to his home as a companion for his mother. The accident occurred at 1st st. and Maryland ave. ne.

The woman said she was uninjured, but when Kelly arrived at his home he discovered she was ill. He took her to the hospital.

The streetcar, police said, was operated by George E. Wood, 30, 250 15th st. se. Both he and Kelly will appear at a coroner's inquest.

In the event of lost-mortem discloses Mrs. Roat was fatally injured in the accident, her death will raise the District fatality toll to 87 this year.

Local OPA Acts

Holiday Meal Limit Fixed At '42 Price

Prices for holiday meals already established in 1942 may be charged by Washington restaurants this year, local OPA officials said yesterday.

If, in 1942, a restaurant operator had set up his holiday meal price as $1 about a normal charge, he can do the same this year. However, he will not be allowed to advance the price any higher.

In Maryland, OPA has ruled that prices may not go above the 1943 level and in no case more than 10 per cent over those charged on December 31, 1942.

Should a Maryland restaurant wish to tack on an additional price to cover the cost of entertainment which formerly was not provided, permission has to be obtained from the OPA. Curtailment in food or entertainment should be reflected in lower prices, OPA said.

Alice Padgett to Direct Survey Of District Men Facing Draft

NEW DISTRICT DRAFT AIDE. Miss Alice Padgett, assistant professor of social work at Catholic University yesterday was sworn in as aide to Director William Leahy and will organize new program tracing social and medical history of potential inductees.

Miss Alice Padgett, assistant professor of social work at Catholic University, yesterday was sworn in by D. C. Selective Service Director William F. Leahy to recruit 300 trained social workers for proposed medical and social surveys of men facing the draft.

Miss Padgett, first woman to assume an administrative position with Selective Service, will assist in developing the plan, ordered by National Selective Service, to furnish induction stations with adequate medical, social and educational histories of registrants. Better classification of potential draftees is expected.

Leahy said he hoped the survey would be in operation by the first of the year, since information obtained in case histories might prove some 4-Fs were actually fit for service and thus cut down the drafting of fathers.

Miss Padgett, president of the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers, will call upon casework agencies to loan some of their social workers on office time to supplement the proposed corps of volunteers.

Daylight Air-Raid Test Here Leaves Officials Well Pleased

The first afternoon air raid test of the year, which caught thousands of Christmas shoppers unaware on downtown streets, yesterday at 2:13 p. m., was "unusually well-observed," District civilian defense officials declared last night.

Adding a touch of front-line reality were White House soldiers, who immediately manned fox holes and took up positions behind buildings and trees, with only machine gun nozzles protruding. Others scattered a block each way, taking up posts previously assigned. Antiaircraft gunners rushed to their guns.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, in charge of civilian defense, revealed that more wardens and auxiliary policemen participated in the test than ever before. An especially large turnout of officials in the command center in Municipal Center was also reported.

Indications from nearby counties were that their control centers were also well-manned, Commissioner J. Russell Young said.

The test was scheduled by the Army on the recommendation of the District Commissioners, since no practice raids had been staged for almost two months. Statistically, it was the District's twenty-seventh test in the past two years, of which nine were daytime tests.

The yellow warning signal was flashed to civilian defense workers, Police and Fire Departments at 1:45 p. m., but the public didn't hear the blue alert until 2:13 p. m. Traffic continued until 2:33 p. m., when the red signal (fluctuating blasts) sent pedestrians and taxi, bus and streetcar passengers into shelter for 10 minutes.

In the downtown area a few straggling violations were noted, even a few minutes before the second blue was sounded (at 2:43 p. m.), but no official reports have been made of nonobservance. The all-clear came at 2:58 p. m.

Two girls were seen scurrying across Union Station Plaza with suitcases during the red signal, and even the wardens who chased them couldn't discourage their rush for a train. A young woman whose appointment at civilian defense headquarters coincided with the test called to explain that she would be late. She was peremptorily told to refrain from phoning until the test was over.

Meanwhile, the Maryland Council of Defense announced that no air-raid tests would be called in that State during the holiday season.

Records Show Drop in Cafe Dirt Violations

Washington's food establishments are scouring their premises of dangerous dirt in salutary fashion, it was revealed yesterday when officials reported violations of health regulations had dropped from 48 a week to 4.

The decrease has been achieved in a steady trend, it was said; the last week of July 48 proprietors paid fines and forfeitures amounting to $1200; the last week in September, 15 paid $625; the last week in October 11 cases paid $375; and in the week ending December 4, 4 paid $175.

When wartime manpower shortages caused large turnovers in food establishments, violations mounted.

Reductions followed a Post campaign last summer, and most proprietors responded to the educational campaign, Health Officer George C. Ruhland said yesterday.

However, he said there were some who didn't care and had to be allowed to tell it to the courts. The number of these offenders has been reduced since personal court appearances in addition to payment of fines have been required, according to Dr. Ruhland.

Under the present system, first offenders are required to attend weekly Health Department conferences where they are shown proper methods of sterilizing utensils and otherwise maintaining their premises lawfully. Second offenders must go to court.

The department now has 32 inspectors who keep watch over the city's 6000 eating establishments.

Margaret Trenholm Woolley of 2100 Connecticut ave. nw, christened a Liberty ship named for her great-grandfather, Robert Wickliffe, Kentucky State senator and lawyer, at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard yesterday.

The Old Changeth

President Will Not Light '43 Yule Tree

For the first time in 21 years, the annual ceremony of having the national community Christmas tree lighted by the President will be abandoned this year, it was announced yesterday.

Since 1922 it has been customary for the brilliantly lighted tree, the symbol of the yule season, to be lighted by the President, and in 1933 President Roosevelt inaugurated the custom of having the tree on the south lawn of the White House.

District Commissioner John Russell Young suggested that the custom be held in abeyance this year in order to save gasoline and as the result of transportation difficulties. The suggestion was adopted at the White House, it was announced yesterday.

However, President Roosevelt will give his customary Christmas Eve message over the radio to the Nation.

Two Plead Guilty Under Mann Act In Case of Girl, 18

Two persons pleaded guilty yesterday in District Court to violating the Mann Act by transporting an 18-year-old girl from Roanoke, Va.

The defendants were Mrs. Julia E. Largen, 27, who admitted one charge, and Ewell G. Tasker, 29, who pleaded guilty to three charges. A third defendant, Robert L. Wheeling, jr., 26, pleaded guilty earlier and awaits sentence.

Maximum penalty is 20 months to five years imprisonment on each charge. Justice Matthew F. McGuire will impose sentence.

Cold Victims Again Urged To Stay Home

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday reemphasized his request that all persons with cold symptoms stay at home to avoid spreading infection.

In the face of reduced medical personnel, it is unfair to expose others, he said.

The Health Department requested teachers to dismiss children promptly from school if they show signs of a cold, and parents to keep youngsters at home if they have cold symptoms.

Dr. Ruhland asked local radio stations and newspapers to circulate the following advice in an effort to curb the local epidemic:

Do not send children to school if they show symptoms of influenza; keep ill persons at home until they are fully recovered; segregate the ill and the well at home; wash hands thoroughly before each meal; clean dishes thoroughly; avoid crowded places.

Advice to Restaurants

Managers of public eating places were urged to sterilize glasses and eating utensils scruplously, and to have food handlers wash their hands frequently with soap and running water.

Meanwhile absence reports in the public schools indicated an increase in the number of cases to a total of about 8000 so far, Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Division of Preventable Diseases, said. An analysis of absence reports up to Tuesday, December 7, indicated absence of about 7 per cent of the student body, a total of about 6000 to 7000.

Absence reports indicated that elementary schools were hardest hit. Out of 900 elementary school teachers, 150 were on sick lists yesterday. In a survey of 11,413 pupils in 30 elementary schools, more than 2900 were sick.

Although these figures show 25 per cent absent, school officials pointed out that this was for all causes, not just colds.

Warning to Schools

Supt. Robert L. Haycock said that Health Department requests had been transmitted to all elementary schools by telephone and to those in charge of senior and junior high schools.

The weekly dance held at the Bureau of Engraving for servicemen, sponsored by the District Department of Recreation and the Women's Battalion each Friday night will be postponed until next Friday.

Meanwhile, more than 5000 cases of influenza have been reported to the Alexandria Health Department since December 1, it was learned yesterday. Dr. William Arkell Browne, city health officer, described the situation as "serious" but warned against "hysteria."

Thomas C. Williams, superintendent of schools, said that Alexandria's schools will not be closed, although he admitted an increase of more than 600 absences over two weeks ago.

Kramer School Dedicatory Rites Are Held

Stephen Elliott Kramer Junior High School, at 17th and Q sts. se., in operation since April of this year, was officially dedicated last night in ceremonies in the school auditorium.

Built to relieve overcrowded conditions at Anacostia High School, which is but a block away, Kramer is running at capacity with 1400 pupils and a staff of 48 teachers. John M. Riecks is principal of the school.

Col. Charles W. Kutz, engineer Commissioner, in presenting a golden key as a token for the school to Dr. Robert A. Maurer, vice president of the Board of Education, recalled that at one time work on the school was interrupted by the War Production Board.

Kutz also recalled that only the intervention of the school board succeeded in convincing the WPB to let the building be used for school purposes instead of a Federal office building after approval had been gained to finish construction of the three-story brick structure.

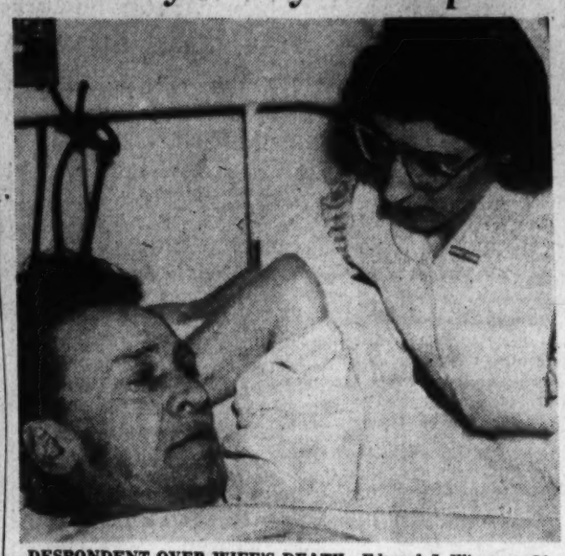
Mrs. Stephen Elliott Kramer, widow of the assistant superintendent of schools for whom the new school is named, was guest of honor and heard manifold praise for her husband by the speakers of the evening.

They included, besides Colonel Kutz, Dr. Maurer, and Riecks, Robert L. Haycock, superintendent of schools; Lawson J. Cantrell assistant superintendent of schools; Mrs. William E. Linden, president, Kramer Parent-Teacher Association; Adelbert W. Lee, member, Board of Education, and Henry W. Draper, supervising principal, First Division.

The invocation was said by the Rev. Allan F. Poore, and the Rev. Joseph V. Buckley pronounced the benediction.

The school orchestra and major chorus presented a program of music. More than 300 persons attended the ceremony.

Landlord Accused in Death Caused by Leaky Gas Pipe



DESPONDENT OVER WIFE'S DEATH—Edward J. Wissman, 54, who managed to survive effects of the leaking gas, recuperates at Gallinger Hospital. The widower is consoled by his nurse, Helen Rizzo

Andrew J. Watts, 65-year-old rooming house operator, was charged with manslaughter and held without bail at the District Jail last night in connection with the gas death of Mrs. Margaret C. Wissman, 42, a tenant at 224 G st. nw.

He was ordered held by a coroner's jury at an inquest yesterday when the panel decided he was "criminally negligent." Escaping illuminating gas killed Mrs. Wissman and felled her husband, Edward J. Wissman, 54, at their apartment last Monday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald revealed that Watts admitted installing gas pipes for a cooking plate in the Wissmans' rooms without obtaining a permit. Detectives testified their investigation disclosed the gas escaped from a crack in a section of water pipe which was used instead of gas piping.

The couple was found unconscious by Mrs. Helen Whitaker, another roomer, at the G st. address. They were taken to Freedmen's Hospital, where Mrs. Wissman was pronounced dead.

Wissman, an employe of the Diamond Cab Co., was later transferred to Gallinger Hospital. He was reported recovering last night though he was heartbroken over his wife's death. Physicians said "he sobs constantly."

The couple had been living at the G st. rooming house since early summer with their daughter, Mrs. Catherine Cassio, 32. Mrs. Cassio was out buying groceries at the time the fatal accident occurred.

Watts, a Spanish-American War veteran, lives in a basement room in the house.

Mason Studies All Legal Items As Part of Commission Duties

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Commissioner Guy Mason, like his colleague, John Russell Young, is a veteran newspaperman.

Unlike Young, he was available to this reporter to tell his own story about his work.

GUY MASON

On the fourth day of this District Building sojourn, his private secretary, Anne W. Davidge, said she thought he was in his office.

This is Commissioner Mason's own account of a "typical day" of service to the people of Washington:

"I usually arrive about 9 a. m. and leave about 5:30 p. m. There is a great deal of mail to be opened and read. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays I sit in on board meetings with the other Commissioners.

"Afternoons I am in conference with health and welfare officials. I also have all legal matters referred to me by the other Commissioners. I study these matters before passing them on to Corporation Counsel Keech.

Active in Service

"Most of Monday, after board meetings, and part of Tuesday, I receive visitors who want to take up District matters. When Congress is in session, I am in constant attendance on legislation affecting the District.

"I try to get to all my departments three or four times every year."

The Commissioner was asked if he could be a little more detailed in his description of his work.

He said. "Well, it's like I said. There is something doing all the time. It's hard to say just what and when."

Mason was born in Pierston, Ind., in 1880. He was raised and educated in Elizabeth, N. J., and Middleton, N. Y. Two years ago, President Roosevelt appointed him to the Commissionership.

First Named by Wilson

His first taste of a bigger life—that of serving the public—was given him by Woodrow Wilson in an appointment to the Union Station Plaza Commission. This was followed by serving as secretary of the Woodrow Wilson Independent League in 1916. In 1913, he met Franklin D. Roosevelt when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

While he was a White House correspondent for International News Service, he studied law and later finished his course at National University. He was practicing law when appointed a Commissioner.

Since his appointment as Commissioner, Mason said, he has sponsored all war recreation activities in the District. He set up three recreational structures, including the schools, the National Capital Park Commission and the public playgrounds. He brought the three phases together under the District Recreation Board.

Under Fire Recently

Commissioner Mason's most important responsibility, in war-crowded Washington, is supervision of the Health Department. It was in this connection that his office was under severe congressional and public scrutiny during the recent Gallinger Hospital investigation.

Mason has since drawn up a new organization chart for the hospital and from his talk one gets the impression that there'll be no more scandals at Gallinger.

This, then, is Guy Mason, who, like the other civilian Commissioner, John Russell Young, occupies an office in the District Building, furnished with a Frigidaire, a bathroom and a big wood-burning fireplace.

Mahon Resigns From District Subcommittee

Representative Mahon (Democrat) of Texas resigned yesterday as chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee for the District of Columbia, saying he needs more time to devote to other vital subcommittees.

"I believe we are entering an era of good feeling between Congress and the District," he said. "There is little friction between the two, and excellent cooperation."

He served on the District Appropriations subcommittee for five years, two of them as chairman. He also is a member of the War Department, Treasury, and the Post-office subcommittees.

District Commissioners expressed appreciation of Chairman Mahon's efforts on the city's behalf.

City News In Brief

A large plaque—a likeness of Maj. Edward J. Kelly burned out of wood—was presented to Inspector Harvey Callahan yesterday by the Sentinel Club at a testimonial ceremony.

Inspector Callahan received the plaque for Major Kelly, who was unable to attend because of illness. The plaque was made by Andrew Jackson, who is a District fireman.

The Sentinel Club consists of the Negro policemen and firemen in the District. Both the Metropolitan Police Band and the octette of the Northeast Choral Society presented music for the occasion.

W. Va. Society to Dance

Shoes, Garments Stolen

Three cartons of women's low-heeled shoes and a carton of cotton underwear were reported stolen from an Eagle Transfer Co. truck which was parked alongside the warehouse at 4th and E sts. sw. yesterday. Lawrence M. Gates, manager of the transfer company, said the shoes were consigned to Jelleff's. Total value was placed at $150.

5 D.C. Groups Back Home Rule Bill

By Anne Hagner

Representatives of five civic organization appeared yesterday before a Senate District Subcommittee to voice their approval of the McCarran bill granting home-rule to Washington residents.

Those who expressed views were: Kenneth P. Armstrong, Burroughs Citizens Association; Sparrel A. Wood, Citizens' Forum of Columbia Heights; Samuel Levine, National Lawyers Guild; Mrs. M. K. Manoukian, Young Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. Richard Boke, League of Women Shoppers.

Armstrong devoted most of his testimony to rebuttal of views expressed earlier in the hearings by Joseph C. McGarraghy, Washington Board of Trade spokesman, whose opposition to the McCarran measure included declarations that "no real cross-section of a vote could be obtained in the District because many of its residents vote in other States."

Could Apply to Any State

McCarran commented: "The Board of Trade's argument could be made about every State in the Union now because of increasing shifts in population. Quite a proportion of my State comes and goes and makes no protest of voting there."

A flurry of excitement croped up in the midst of Armstrong's recital as a visitor, who gave his name as W. H. Loder, jumped to his feet and makes no pretext of voting to voting un-American? If many of us think that the present commission form of government is efficient, do you consider it un-American for us to oppose local elections?"

"I call it un-American to oppose the people's right to govern themselves!" Armstrong retorted.

Some Favor Commission

"There is quite a group that likes the Board of Commissioners just as it is," Loder continued. "If you call the District Building to have a dead dog removed from the street, a truck comes along and removes him in 20 minutes to an hour. You can't deny that for efficiency."

"I deny it vigorously," replied another prospective witness, but McCarran stilled the brief storm by calling for order.

Mrs. Manoukian, who said she represented the YWCA staff and not its board, told the subcommittee she had a son in the service and entered a plea to "restore the District franchise so that when the boys come back they can enjoy the privileges of democracy they're fighting for." She and her co-workers ask prompt passage of the McCarran bill.

Wood, of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, stated that he felt the hearings this week are indicative of the need for change in District administration.

Hardship on Lawmakers

"The first day two witnesses were heard and the chairman had to adjourn because of another meeting. The same was true yesterday (Wednesday). This is no criticism of the members of the subcommittee, for naturally their own constituents are due the first consideration," he said.

"It goes farther than that, Mr. Wood," agreed Senator McCarran. "Senator Overton and I had to go to the Appropriations Committee because there are national demands for maintenance through appropriations. The call of one's State is only part of it—there is always the national call."

"Exactly," Wood replied. "Running the District of Columbia works a hardship on the members of both the Senate and House District Committees, and a hardship on their constituents in their home States."

He added that his organization wholeheartedly recommends passage of the bill "because it is a step in the right direction." The forum also favors national representation, he said.

"The District has the most undemocratic system of administration in the entire United States," Wood asserted. "It fails to give the people their natural right of a voice in their own governmental affairs."

He joined with other civic groups in recommending:

1. Calling the elected Commissioners councilmen;
2. Reduction of the $8000 annual salary recommended in the bill, with a suggestion of $2000;
3. Appointment of the city manager without term;
4. Removal of the city manager by the board for cause rather than misconduct.

Levine's statement said: "In times of peace it was anomalous that the Capital . . . should be denied the opportunity of self-government. In time of war this flaw in our democratic armor is more than an anomaly; it is a serious weakness which can be used by Axis propagandists to discredit the United Nations and their struggle for the four freedoms. The McCarran bill must, therefore, be enacted now."

Mrs. Boke's report, read into the record, also favored immediate passage of the bill. The hearings will continue Tuesday at 10:30 a. m.

Railway Policeman Cleared in Shooting

Clarence R. Burke, 48, of 719 North Carolina ave. se. was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in the death of Norman Elmore, Negro, 25, of the first block of K st. ne.

Elmore was killed when Burke's gun went off after the two struggled on the railroad tracks at New Jersey ave. and D st. se. The jury decided that the gun was accidentally discharged.

Burke, who is a railroad policeman, told police, following the accident, that Elmore had tried to get his gun away from him after he had ordered the man off the tracks.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Scholarly, Successful Bachelor, in Late 30s, Can't Make Up His Mind Whether He Honestly Loves the Girl Whom He Thinks of Constantly

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bachelor in my upper thirties and hail from an Eastern city. About 18 months ago, while on a business trip, I met a girl in a small Southern town, who was vacationing there, She is in her twenties and her home is in a large Western city. I saw her almost every evening over a period of 10 days; and we spent some afternoons swimming at a lake or enjoying other sports. She was delightful company every moment; and quite unlike many of the more demanding females of my acquaintance. There were occasional demonstrations of thoughtfulness that surprised me. For example, one afternoon, when I had been caught in a tropical downpour, while away from the hotel on business, she persuaded the hotel manager to send his private car to pick me up, although I had no pre-arrangement to see her, nor did I anticipate such a welcome rescue.

As her vacation ended when my business was concluded, we traveled together as far as the next city on my itinerary,—a full day's journey away. Throughout that trip, she was sweetly provocative and affectionate, to which I was not immune,—this despite the fact that I had never once made any advances, nor had she previously displayed such affection. Until then, I had regarded her as a real pal and had treated her so. She changed trains that evening, and after dinner, I saw her to her compartment. She left with a most affectionate farewell, promising to write and inviting me to visit her. She wrote immediately, while en route home, and although I enjoyed hearing from her, I doubt whether,—at that time,—it would have made any difference to me if she had never written.

Since that date, 18 months ago, our letters have moved frankly from low into high gear in expression of regard. She had been home but a short time when her father died; and she wired me immediately, pouring out her bereavement; and later wrote me concerning some confused aspects of her father's estate, asking my advice, which I gladly gave. Later, she repeatedly inquired when I was coming to visit her, inviting me to stay at her mother's home. I was never able to get away, because of my work. Last September, she came East to spend her two weeks' vacation,—10 days in New York City visiting friends; and four days in a nearby city where I was working at the time.

She Frankly Admits That She Loves Him

DURING THOSE four days, we spent every evening together, going places and enjoying ourselves immensely. The evening preceding her departure, she told me with frank simplicity that she was in love with me, and had been for quite a while. She admitted she had come East principally to see me . . . Since her return home a few months ago, I have thought about her constantly. If early opportunity is available, I honestly want to visit her and meet her family; but frankly, I don't know whether I should go at all. I should also like to send her a Christmas gift that would properly express my feelings; yet I do not wish to mislead the girl (or myself, for that matter),—and I am not sure of my feelings.

She is one of three sisters, one of whom is married. She dresses smartly, is immaculate and has a most pleasant disposition. She is, however, of a highly nervous temperament, as is evinced by her chain-smoking and consumption of large quantities of coffee,—both being her mainstay of diet, from my observation. She is quite thin, probably underweight; had anemia as a child, is rather delicate and tires easily. And although she shows signs of excellent breeding and refinement, and holds a very responsible secretarial position, her formal schooling seems negligible,—judging from the frequently misspelled words and faulty sentence structure of her letters, which are otherwise nicely phrased. In addition to her doubtful state of health, she is of a different faith than I,—a fact which only recently came to light, accidentally.

He Hasn't Experienced The Classic Symptoms

MY WIDOWED mother is a devout, regular church goer (and while I am remiss in the latter regard, I do respect her opinion). She is genuinely anxious for me to discontinue the correspondence, since she adamantly opposes inter-marriage; and further points to the girl's frail constitution as a distinct maternal liability. She might, however, withdraw her objection if the girl were willing to be married in my faith,—and as yet I do not know the girl's views on that subject. Can I be in love with her while still attempting to analyze the effect that these differences would have on marriage,—differences of education (I have had nine years of university training and hold three degrees), of age and of faith? If I loved her, would I be so critical of her frail health, as a possible handicap to maternity? Or, as I have been told by others, is this caution just the bachelor-gremlin asserting itself, and subconsciously providing me with excuses to protect my freedom?

Although I think of her all the time, and really feel that I am in love with her, I do not experience that intoxicated glow or trance-like spell generally regarded as the classic symptom. If I am in love with her, why don't I get "that way" about her? My friends have given me many and varied views. Some favor immediate marriage. Others say break off. And still others say to just wait,—but they don't say for what; nor how long. Your advice as to whether I love her, and whether I should arrange a visit and perhaps propose to her, or whether I should just try to forget her (not an easy thing) will be most seriously appreciated. J. B. R.

Man Isn't in Love; He Is Spell-Bound

DEAR J. B. R.: The situation as I see it is this: You are not in love with the girl, and the material for post-marital growth of compatibility is not present. Rather, you are by now completely fascinated (as she meant you to to be) by her deliberately contrived, most-engaging brand of "all out" campaign for your hand and heart. Very shortly after meeting you, the girl made up her mind to "go after you." By your own artless account, she has used every trick in the bag,—all the time-worn, conventional tricks that the female uses in stalking her man.

It is the banality of her performance in this regard, plus her trite modern mannerisms of being excessively thin and subsisting in large part on cigarettes, "nerves" and coffee, plus her commonplace errors in spelling and sentence-structure, that ticket her strictly run-of-mine girl, with no special, superior or even faintly-promising qualities of intellect, personality or cultural development to recommend her to the attention, much less to the life-keeping, of a man of your caliber,—i. e., of refined sensibilities, thoughtful and humorous mind, and decidedly above-average character and accomplishments. However, the world is rather full of men like yourself, wed to women like her,—with the men growing more bored and detached in the relationship, and the women becoming more "high-strung" and preoccupied with superficial social trivia, as time marches on: simply because the stuff of mental and spiritual rapport between them never was there.

Girl Is Stranger To Him, Actually

THESE WOMEN got their men by much the same process this girl has employed, in roping you in practically to the proposal-point. They are sufficiently astute, in instinct, to recognize and close in on a "good thing" when they see it,—good, from their view, as a source of prestige, indulgent protection and material provision. And while intensely concentrating on what they want, that is provocatively near yet still out of reach, they are, by their standards of emotional feeling, head over heels in love with the guy. But because the feeling doesn't go very deep,—so deep as to be sacred, or inexpressibly wonderful, while it is theoretically their own secret,—they don't mind translating it into campaign fodder to promote their cause, if possible.

By now, this girl has a pretty good knowledge of you as you are,—insofar as she is capable of fathoming and understanding you, that is. Whereas you have only the concept of her that she wishes you to hold; a concept that she has been busily building in your mind since first she decided to annex you, if she could. Actually, you don't know her at all,—in the sense of knowing how she reacts to the realities of life, familiarly endured. Although your thoughts turn constantly in her direction, it is not her true image they dwell on,—but rather a sentimental, romantic, almost-pure-fantasy portrait of her personality, that she has embroidered in your imagination.

It's Now or Never For Making a Break

IT IS MY disinterested conviction that you ought not to give serious consideration to marrying her until you are well and prosaically acquainted with her and her family. But whether you are now too bewitched to pursue that research objectively is the question. Also, if you were to show up in her neck of the woods to try to get your bearings, it is likely she would assume that marriage was already in the bag;—or, at any rate, sweetly imply that she so assumed. So, in fine, it seems to me if you are going to make a break for liberty,—it's now or never. And, frankly, I doubt that you will make the break! M. H.

The Gentler Sex

Job Interview

1933—

"I came to see you about a job——"

"Sorry but——"

"Please let me tell you just a little about my experience——"

"There are absolutely no openings here. We're firing instead of hiring."

"I know, but if in the future——"

"Anyway, we're not taking on women. We feel that the men with families should have the jobs."

"But I have my children——"

"Where's your husband?"

"He was laid off six months ago and he hasn't been able to find a thing."

"Any man can get work if he tries hard enough. Besides, we don't employ married women."

"But I must support my children——"

"A woman's place is in the home."

"Besides I have my mother and father——"

"We're not running a WPA here."

"I'm not asking for charity. I'm trained and experienced in my line—five years for one employer."

"How old are you?"

"Thirty-three."

"We don't take on elderly women—no one above 30. We prefer them under 25."

"But if you'd just look at my references——"

"I haven't time. Besides, we're retrenching."

"Maybe I could leave my name and address——"

"No use. We're not taking on anybody, and if we did, it wouldn't be any women. They make too much fuss."

"I'm sure you'd find I'd adjust to anything, work any hours——"

"No, I just don't want any more women around, and if I did you wouldn't be the type."

"Oh—— I see."

"Yes, frankly, you're too old. Then you're not a snappy dresser. We want smart-looking young girls who will appeal to our clients."

"But my work——"

"We can get plenty of capable men with families to do the work. Anyway, I haven't any more time to discuss it."

"All right. Thank you."

"And say—you take my advice and stay home where you belong."

1943—

"I wished to inquire about your sign, 'WOMAN WANTED'——"

"Won't you sit down please? How soon could you come to work?"

"I'm not sure I could come at all. You see, I've had no experience——"

"That doesn't matter at all. You could take things slowly while you were picking it up. You see, women are very quick to catch on—very adaptable."

"But, of course, at my age——"

"Forget your age. You're just as young as you feel. Besides, we prefer women with poise and experience. They're more responsible."

"But, of course, I have a home. I'm taking care of my grandchildren——"

"Oh well, we could adjust your hours for that. We could even adjust the days."

"I wouldn't want to take on too much——"

"Oh, but the work isn't tiring and we have pleasant working conditions. Anytime you felt like it you could rest. We have wonderful rest rooms."

"Of course, I'm not very strong——"

"Well, if you'd only work three or four days a week we could arrange that. And you could come to work at any hour."

"Another thing, I'm going to have company next week."

"That's all right. You can come after your company leaves."

"Of course I'd have to talk to my husband."

"Say, you have your own life to live, don't you?"

"Well . . . I'd want to think it over . . ."

"Listen Madam! This is really an opportunity. It's a job with a future. There's no telling where you might advance."

"But you see, my home——"

"You'll do a lot better in your home because you have a job. Listen, let me tell you something—it's all nonsense that a woman has to stay in the home all the time."

POST DISCOVERIES

Footnotes for Christmas

More women are wearing sensible shoes these days. Now that shoes are rationed, now that women are walking instead of riding, now that their stride is brisker with things to be done quickly, shoes with towering heels and fancy trim are reserved for strictly evening wear.

That's why we started out to find the fanciest, most feminine, fluffiest pairs of slippers that existed. As soon as she gets home in the evening, any woman will reach for these—as a balance for her streamlined efficiency during the day. They don't require a coupon, either, so they allow not only your feet but your rationed shoes to rest!

All of them come in sizes three to ten.

Fur-Trimmed Slipper

The fur trim on these slippers won't keep her feet warm, but they look awfully nice! The toe is cut out and the sling back make two important style notes that look especially flattering in bedroom slippers. They come in a wonderful variety of colors in rayon satin. The sole is made of felt. Around $2.

Bow-Trim Slipper

Practically every woman buys herself a housecoat or lounging pajamas, but she just window shops when it comes to fancy boudoir slippers. That's where you come in—and you couldn't please her more than by giving her this gay pair of satin slippers with bows and open toes. The soles are made of leather. Around $3.

The Scuffs

Scuffs are one of the most comfortable types of slippers and these are made with an extra fancy touch! The top is made of velvet and the sole is lined in brocade satin. We saw one pair in black and red that would cheer anyone's aching extremities. The wedge sole is a favorite and these will stay on her feet without coaxing. Around $4.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

What do I think of the cruelty children sometimes display? It would be better, perhaps, to call it by another name. I doubt that it is often cruelty for cruelty's sake—which is sadism.

Such apparent cruelty probably is an expression of a lack of imagination toward suffering. It may be a means of getting revenge on animals or helpless children for punishments or injustices suffered by the child from his own relatives, or older children.

Has Sadistic Tendencies

One of my readers, describes a 5-year-old whom she believes to have sadistic tendencies. "He was caught stepping on a kitten, throwing rocks at puppies, booing a smaller playmate.

"The boy is bright and quick-witted. He has constant attention from parents and grandparents but their anxiety and solicitude have made him a problem.

"He has been in nursery school three years but has his first friend now. He is always being sent home for his acts of cruelty which other parents will not countenance."

We must remember that all children are in the process of becoming individuals whose behavior is consistent with the standards our culture considers desirable. We put a high premium upon kindness and consideration, but fail to see that these are not natural to the child, they are learned behavior.

Kindness Is Taught

We teach the child by disapproving of his cruel acts and giving him continual illustrations of kind ones. As children enjoy being approved they change their behavior to accord with our demands and our obvious preferences.

It is possible this indulged boy finds it difficult to express himself as a person except in these unusual and undesirable ways. He is so used to attention that he may have developed this exaggerated way of acting because it is a surefire attention grabber. He may enjoy the concern his behavior arouses.

He might do with less supervision and more freedom. His "booing" may be regarded as an inept way of expressing hospitality, rather than a malicious intent to cause pain.

Miss Milliken Speaker

The Women's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian Church will hold its regular meeting today with a luncheon at 12. At 1 the regular business meeting will be held and at 2 Miss Rhoda Milliken, director, Women's Bureau of the Police Department, will speak. Her subject will be "The Problem of Juvenile Delinquency."

IT'S THE UPKEEP—

New York, N. Y.—The cost of raising a child—from birth to age 18—in an American family in the middle income group totals nearly $10,000, according to statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The costs attending birth average $300. Other expenditures are: Food, $2272; clothing, $710; shelter, $2648; education, $82; medical care, $297; transportation and recreation, $1127; sundries, $326—or a total of $7762.

In arriving at the total of nearly $10,000 the statisticians include the interest that could have been earned on funds actually spent in raising the child. This interest, at 2½ per cent per annum, would have amounted to $2002. Allowance is also made for the fact that six out of every 100 children die before they reach age 18. And they cost the family about $98 for every child reaching that age.

Referring to the various items of expense, which were computed on a pre-war basis for a family with an income of about $2500—the statisticians explain that the figure for education does not include the expense paid through indirect taxation, but only incidental costs. Much the same situation exists in medical and dental costs. Only expenses borne directly by the parents are included in the total, and not the costs of such care provided by public health services.

The figures for shelter, transportation and recreation were arrived at by charging the growing child with one-fifth of the total spent—as being a member of a family composed of five persons.

About Washington and Its First "Invited Invasion"—The Largest, Most Successful

(This is the first in a series of articles on the influx of Britishers here in recent years)

ONLY A FEW persons know—and you won't catch them telling—exactly how many subjects of His Majesty King George of England have come to Washington in the past two years. But the influx probably will go down in history as "The Third British Invasion" of this Nation's Capital.

Bitterly anti-British citizens—a comparatively small contingent in Washington today—harp loudly on the "invasion" idea. They forget that the ingression has been negotiated at the request of our own Government; that staffs of 31 British missions ranging all the way from the Admiralty delegation to ministries of supply from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India, have been urged to come here to engage in cooperative activity with other agencies of the United Nations.

In other words, they forget that if it is "The Third British Invasion," it is the first—ever invited.

It is also the largest and most successful. Back in 1814, a few thousand redcoats were more than enough to burn the White House planned by Hoban after the palace of the Duke of Leinster in Dublin. Today, a much larger "army"—but a friendly one—from the British empire is solidly entrenched in this wartime metropolis.

BRITISH MISSIONS are scattered all over the city. Their chiefs sit on innumerable boards with American leaders and confer with representatives of the Soviet Union, China, and such others of the United Nations as are necessary to provide for the most effective employment of joint resources.

A larger army than the one that sacked America's Capital in 1814 is employed in the British missions alone, and the personnel of the British Embassy has doubled itself in the past few years. All employes of the British missions are not subjects of King George, however. Numerous Americans are assigned to clerical work and, in some cases, as advisers.

The British Information Service, set up in July, 1941, and now a beehive of activity in what was once a bank building on New York ave., employs a number of Americans in its registry. Like that of other British agencies, its executive work is, of course, carried on by its own countrymen.

IN THE MINDS of a few Washingtonians who have never had occasion to find out differently, the British Information Service is a kind of propaganda outlet for the British Empire. Actually, it is just what its title suggests. The agency was founded because so many questions poured into the British Embasy after war began that a special service had to be set up to take care of them. Today, more than 50 per cent of the queries handled there come from U. S. Government bureaus and are relative to the way wartime problems were handled in England during the blitzkrieg, and since.

Members of the Washington press, still smarting from blows to their pride inflicted by undiplomatic British diplomats in the past, could hardly believe their ears when they got not only civil answers but complete cooperation and all available information from the British Information Service. Inured to being put off—or told off—by embassy underlings for almost a decade before war clouds began to gather in Europe, most reporters had ceased soliciting information from the Embassy long before Sir Ronald Lindsay and his American-born wife bowed out of the Washington picture.

TODAY, COURTEOUS voices answer the telephones at the Embassy, and queries are either answered there or referred to the British Information Service, where Mrs. Madeline Miller or Miss Noorna Butler, daughter of the British Minister and Mrs. Harold Butler, give information of every type imaginable from 9 a. m., until 6:30 p. m., and then on up until 9 p. m., in case of emergency. The cooperative attitude on the part of the Information Service has done its share toward cementing Anglo-American relations. Liaison officers in the other British agencies and the British Embassy itself have likewise smoothed the ruffled feelings of many Americans with anti-British inclinations in the past three years.

Never before has there been such obvious and encouraging coordination of effort between the United States and Great Britain as that now going on in Washington.

Dinner Given For Envoy and Snra. de Jimenez

The Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Jiminez were the guests in whose honor Mrs. Louise Valerie DeJan of Panama, entertained last night at a buffet supper at the Mayflower.

Mrs. DeJan, who lived in Panama for 25 years, is spending several weeks in Washington as the house guest of Maj. and Mrs. Edward H. Conger at their home on Alaska ave. Last night's dinner was attended by 40 or more guests from diplomatic, army and navy circles whom Mrs. DeJan has known in Panama.

Commission Chief Host to Visitors

Maj. Gen. Leitao de Carvalho, chief of the joint Brazil-United States Defense Commission, will be host this evening at a dinner at the Shoreham, honoring Brig. Gen. O. Cordeiro Faria, Brig. Gen. C. Cereira da Costa, their aides, and a few close friends. The high-ranking Brazilian army officers are among the Brazilian military contingent which came to this country in September and, after a cross-country tour, is planning to leave soon for Brazil via Miami.

Mrs. Lee Back From Trip to Guatemala

Returning on Tuesday from a trip to Guatemala, Mrs. Cazenove Lee has many bright memories of this land of sunshine and flowers.

It was in October that Mrs. Lee left to visit her son-in-law, Lieut. Walter B. Mahoney, jr., United States Naval Attache at Guatemala City, and her daughter, Mrs. Mahoney, and to meet for the first time her granddaughter, little Barbara Lee Mahoney, now about six months old. Mrs. Lee stopped in Mexico for a few days on her way down and returning by plane landed in New Orleans where she also made a visit before coming on to Washington.

By contrast to wartime Washington, Guatemala City is a paradise. There is no servant problem; laundry and cleaning services are running on a 24-hour schedule; food is plentiful and good; and there is always sunshine and flowers. Everybody cultivates a flower garden and there are masses of blooms in every hue and shade.

But the people of Guatemala City are fully war-conscious. The women are all working for the Red Cross, many men are mobilized and soldiers in uniform guard all the bridges, the railways and other strategic points throughout the country. The newspapers headline the latest developments on the battle fronts but the American colony depends on one of the weekly news magazines for the real picture of world-wide events.

Mrs. Lee was in Guatemala when President Umbico entertained at a mammoth reception in the new palace in celebration of his birthday anniversary. This is annually the gayest event in the year, with the whole population of the capital invited. Even the Indians from neighboring villages make the pilgrimage, stand in line for hours to greet their chief executive and spend the remainder of the day watching the parades and dancing in the streets.

Constance Barrows To Be Wed Dec. 15

The marriage of Miss Constance Asenath Barrows to Ned Carter Krouskop will take place December 15, in the parsonage of the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church.

Gen Carvalho entertained at day at the Shoreham and the cocktails for the group Wednes- United States members of the commission were hosts at a cocktail party last evening at the Carlton. The visitors will leave for New York Morday.

Ready Wit of Chinese Envoy Saves the Day

The genial Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Wei, proved himself an able and masterful host at this week's meeting of the United Nations Club which took place at Twin Oaks.

Almost 400 guests thronged the embassy for the occasion . . . more than twice as many as had been expected. Young visitors in town from practically every nation continued to move down the receiving line and on into the spacious rooms until every nook and cranny was filled.

When it was time to show the program of films, hardly a space could be found for the projection machine. The audience overflowed the hall, the stairway and landing, leaving little more than breathing room. And the inevitable happened, a misplaced film reel. There followed an uncomfortable pause.

Then up stepped Dr. Wei to bridge the gap. No wordy eulogy to the United Nations ensued, but rather a few well-turned phrases. He stole the evening's spotlight and won a round of laughter and applause, when, with a wave of his hand, he remarked: "We are indeed United tonight." And the show went on.

Russian Envoy to Entertain United Nations Club

Two gala evenings are scheduled this week for the United Nations Club. On Sunday evening Gypsy Markoff, famous entertainer who was injured in the crash of a Lisbon-bound clipper, will sing for the club in the lovely old house at 2107 Massachusetts ave., loaned to the club for the occasion by the Texas Co. This will be Miss Markoff's first engagement since the crash, and although she is still under the doctor's care she is determinedly trying to do her share in the war effort.

Henri Hoppenot, Minister Plenipotentiary and Delegate of the French Committe of National Liberation, and Mme. Hoppenot will be guests of honor. Host and hostess for the gathering will be Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Leland Miller. General Miller is chief of the budget of the Air Forces and returned to Washington a short while ago from a long assignment in England.

Mrs. Pierre Pelen will serve as chairman, and members of the Navy League Juniors and Jango Junior League will be junior hostesses.

Next Wednesday evening members will be guests of Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Gromyko at the Soviet Embassy, at a special presentation of Russian films.

Mrs. Deson Sze will serve as chairman of the evening.

Mrs. William L. Boyd 2d will entertain at a late afternoon party tomorrow at the Shoreham.

Use Simple Menus for Pre-Holiday Meals

Stuffed hearts and baked potatoes make up a point-saving dinner. Food of this type not only saves precious points but also time. While the hearts and accompaning vegetables, plus the potatoes, are baking, the cook can be making ready the rest of the meal and setting an attractive table

Martha Ellyn

This Christmas will be one of limited food supplies. But the curtailment is so slight that no one will waste away for lack of food. We are still a land of plenty. It is to be hoped that meal planners will be sensible in the amount of food they buy and prepare for the holidays.

But habit is a formidable thing. In past years we have overstocked the pantry, cellar, attic, refrigerator and other available storage places with the traditional foods. Suen is not a good idea this year.

Overeating is not good for either health or figure. So let's begin now, these two weeks before Christmas and eat less of the too-rich foods. Christmas brings an overabundance of rich foods—turkey, mince pie, stuffing, fruit cake, plum pudding, candy and a host of other high-calorie foods.

Let's take a holiday away from too-heavy meals and prepare some of the worthy foods which are off the beaten track of many menu planners. Let's plan meals which are point savers, using such meats as heart and liver as the pivotal food. Oven dinners are in many homes too few and far between.

An oven dinner made up of stuffed veal or beef hearts, baked Irish or sweet potatoes, with turnips and carrots is a typical American meal. Using this baked dish, let's plan a menu:

Dinner Menu

Chilled Grapefruit Juice.
Stuffed Hearts. Baked Potatoes.
Cold Slaw. Enriched Bread.
Fruit Gelatin. Oatmeal Cookies.
Beverage.

Recipes for preparing the stuffed hearts and baked potatoes follow:

STUFFED HEARTS

Buy two to three veal hearts or one or two beef hearts. Purchase according to the number to be served. Wash the hearts and remove the center muscles, sufficient to make room for stuffing. Season hearts, inside and out, with salt and pepper and spread with curry powder. To prepare dressing, use 1 cup dry bread crumbs or toast crumbs in oven. Add to crumbs ½ teaspoon poultry seasoning, ½ teaspoon onion salt (or 1 onion finely chopped if you are fortunate to have it), 3 tablespoons melted margarine, butter or other fat. Toss together lightly and stuff the hearts. Fasten with skews or tie with a string. Dust outside of hearts with flour. Place in heavy roasting pan; dot tops with fat. Cover bottom of roaster with water. Bake in oven at 250 degrees for two hours, if veal hearts, or two and one-half hours if beef hearts. Add carrots cut in strips, and turnips cut in small cubes, and continue cooking until vegetables are tender. This will take not more than 20 to 30 minutes.

BAKED POTATOES.

Choose medium-sized potatoes. Scrub well in several waters. Oil skins with margarine, butter or other fat. Bake at 450 degrees for 40 to 60 minutes, according to size of potato. When potato is cooked remove from oven and immediately cut gash in the center. Squeeze each potato to force out the steam. Forcing out steam assures a dry, mealy potato instead of a soggy, unappetizing one. Season well with salt insert piece of butter or margarine and dust with paprika.

Liver should be served more often too. Not because of its low point value alone but because it is an exceptional source of protein minerals and vitamins. Pork liver is especially high in iron and is usually the economy buy.

Beef, pork, lamb and calves' liver all may be prepared in a variety of ways. To become familiar with many of these different methods of preparation makes it possible to serve liver frequently yet with a different taste appeal each time.

Many Possibilities

Liver may be roasted as any other tender piece of meat. It is left in one piece, the membrane is removed and strips of bacon or salt pork are laid across the top, or the liver is basted with drippings while roasting.

Braising is a method of preparation that is especially suited to beef and pork liver. These are best when cooked slowly with moist heat to the well-done stage. Braising may be done with sliced, cubed, or julienne cut liver, or with one large piece. The meat may be floured or not, as desired.

French fried liver strips or cubes have a pleasing crisp texture. For variety ground liver patties are a possibility. In addition to the dishes mentioned, stews and other liver combination recipes are old favorites.

Braised liver with vegetables is a dish chuck full of good flavor and nutrition. The following recipe will make an appealing main dish for this dinner menu:

DINNER MENU
Braised Liver and Vegetables
Apple and Celery Salad
Corn Muffins Jam
Spice Cake Beverage

One pound of liver will serve four persons generally when cooked with the vegetables.

BRAISED LIVER WITH VEGETABLES

Dredge 1 pound sliced liver in mixture made of 2 tablespoons flour, ¾ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Brown in 4 tablespoons hot drippings. Clean and dice 6 potatoes, 2 carrots and 1 onion, (if you have it). If onion is not available, use onion salt. Remove liver from drippings and brown vegetables in the same skillet. Add liver, 1 cup tomato juice and 1 cup boiling water. Cover and allow to simmer 1½ hours. Thicken gravy if desired.

Ring form is another way to serve this meat. Get 1½ pounds liver and enough sausage to make ½ cupful. Then proceed preparing it according to the following recipe:

LIVER RING

Mix together, 1½ pounds liver, juice of ½ lemon, 2 tablespoons tomato catsup, ½ cup pork sausage, ⅛ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon onion salt, 1 well beaten egg, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Turn this mixture into a ring mold lined with slices of bacon. Press the mixture firmly into the mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for 1 hour. Turn onto a round platter. Fill center with seasoned green beans, lima beans, carrots or other vegetable desired. May be served with cream sauce.

SPICED CRANBERRIES

Combine 2 cups sugar, 1 cup water, 2 2-inch sticks cinnamon, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, grated rind of 1 lemon and boil together for 5 minutes. Add 4 cups fresh cranberries and cook slowly, without stirring, until all the skins pop open. Chill thoroughly before serving. Makes 1 quart.

Winter's on the Way; Householders Insulate

With winter on the way, many householders are going in for amateur insulation. Several materials are sold in lumber yards and stores which can be installed without too much work and they're said to save from 20 to 30 per cent on your heating bill.

Suitable ones include rock wool, mineral wood, certain vegetable fiber materials and mica dust. These are laid between the rafters or blown into the air pockets in wall or roof or tacked under the roof with laths. They act like a quilt or blanket around the house in winter.—ELIZABETH MAC RAE BOYKIN

District DAR Defense Group To Have Buddy Bag Party Saturday

The District National Defense Committee DAR will have its Christmas Buddy Bag party tomorrow, 3 p. m., at the Statler Hotel. Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, district chairman, and chairman of the Buddy Bag project, will preside.

Admiral Emory S. Land, Administrator of the War Shipping Administration, will speak on "Our Merchant Marine" and accept the Buddy Bags presented by the District daughters.

Mrs. William A. Becker, past president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution and national chairman of the Buddy Bag project, will come from her home in Summit, N. J., to participate and speak on "Christmas Buddy Bags for the Merchant Marine."

Lieut. Comdr. Leo W. Madden, chief of chaplains, U. S. Merchant Service, King's Point, N. Y., will give the invocation.

The U. S. Navy Band orchestra, under the direction of Warrant Officer Richard Townsend, will furnish music. There will be entertainment by eight trainees of the USMS American Engineer.

The Buddy Bags to be presented by the sixty chapters of the District and junior members, the Junior American Citizens, and by members of the CAR will be sent to merchant seamen and the naval gunnery crews on merchant ships which will be at sea on Christmas Day.

Junior membership girls will act as ushers. Mrs. Geoffry Creyke, State Regent of the District, and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, national vice president general, will bring greetings.

Man's Origin at Sea Level Keeps Aviation Doctors Busy

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

AVIATION MEDICINE, per se, is a brand new science, and while many of its most pressing problems have been solved, there are still plenty that are proving hard nuts to crack.

Man is a terrestrial animal. You can tell that by his design—his anatomy. And not only that, he originated at sea level and that is where he is still most at home. To send him 10, 20 or 30 thousand feet in the air is to discombobulate his physiology entirely.

The following quotation from a book, "Psychology in Aviation," by Dr. Chalmers L. Gemmill (published by C. C. Thomas, Springfield, Ill.), will give you some idea of the things the aviation doctor is up against.

"Expansion of Intestinal Gas—In an ascent of 38,389 feet, one volume of gas originally in the intestinal tract at sea level now occupies five volumes. This expansion of gas causes distention and abdominal discomfort in the aviator ascending to such altitudes and may cause respiratory and circulatory distress if the expansion of the gas forces the diaphragm to push up on the heart and lungs."

Other Aviation Problems

One of the aviation problems not yet solved is that of the "bends." When air pressure is changed comparatively rapidly, bubbles of nitrogen are forced out of the blood vessels into the muscles, causing cramps.

The deep sea diver, who has worked an hour or more under pressure, is brought to the surface gradually in a closed chamber in which the air pressure is slowly brought back to surface conditions.

The aviator cannot be put in an air-tight chamber. The nearest solution to the problem, I am told by Dr. John F. Fulton of Yale University, who is directing the researches, is to select men who are not likely to get the bends.

But the aviation medicos are not the only men in the military medical and surgical fields who are having problems. This war is like no other war in the destructiveness of the weapons, and the shattering effect on men's nervous systems.

Nervous Disorders

Take boys who were not raised to be soldiers. Throw them into a combat area and some of them just get mad enough to eat it up and some can't take it.

In about 53 per cent of the latter it goes to the stomach or bowels. They have diarrhoea or they throw up. It's perfectly natural. The old saying about a distressing spectacle—"It made me sick to my stomach"—applies.

But what to do with them when they apply at a base hospital? The digestive disorder is merely a symptom of nerve shock. The patient will never be any good for combat service again.

My Great Uncle Heber told me once—"I git the diarrhoea at Gettysburg and I ain't got over it for 60 years."

Temperance Unions To Meet Jointly

The Central and Amethyst Iota Sigma Woman's Christian Temperance Unions will hold a joint meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the All States Hotel, 514 19th st. nw.

A play entitled "Christmas in a Cobbler's Shop" will be given by the Amethyst Union under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Jewell. Miss Emma T. Watts, president of the Central Union, will preside.

Children's Country Home Plans Party

There's a lot of youthful speculation going on this season as to "just what Christmas means anyhow" among little inhabitants of the rambling white French farm . . . known as Children's Country Home . . . out at 18th st. and Bunker Hill rd.

But, it won't be long before the youngsters will find out because these tots, all convalescent and undernourished, are going to have a Christmas all their own, and a very merry one to boot, furnished by members of the board of managers of the home.

There'll be a tree with lights and ornaments and toys of all descriptions. The "big party" is all set for Thursday, December 23, and will be held "some time before dinner."

Those Planning Party

Mrs. Edward Keating is president of the board of managers of Children's Country Home. Mrs. C. Thomas Claggett and Mrs. Moran McConihe are in charge of getting the tree, trimming it and purchasing the toys; Mrs. Philip O. Coffin is chairman of entertainment. Others working on the party include Mrs. John Newbold, jr., Mrs. A. Y. P. Garnett, jr., Mrs. George Wheeler, Mrs. Richard Griffith, Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., and the Countess de Baillet La Tour.

The board's executives, in addition to Mrs. Keating, include Mrs. J. Butler Wright, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Nathan Scott, vice president; Mrs. Richard Griffin, recording secretary, and Mrs. Arthur S. Lord, corresponding secretary.

Children's Country Home, a Community Chest agency, is a nonsectarian year-round home for convalescent care of sick and undernouished children. Its capacity is 43 youngsters.

Purpose of Home

Children up to 6 years of age are admitted to the home when they are in need of convalescent care following acute illness, and when such care cannot be supplied by their parents due to insufficient income or inadequate home conditions. Children usually are admitted on recommendation by physicians, by welfare agencies, or hospital social service departments.

The convalescent children are attended by trained nurses and are under constant medical care.

The professional staff consists of four trained nurses, one playground teacher, seven nursery aides and a half-time social worker. The building is located on spacious grounds and includes twenty-five rooms. Care is given free in many cases, but where the parents are able to meet even a small part of the cost, payments are arranged.

American Pen Women to Hold Monthly Meeting Tuesday

The executive committee of the National League of American Pen Women will meet Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. in the Willard Hotel for its regular monthly meeting. In addition to considering applications for membership, the board will discuss methods for adding impetus to the drive for books and games for men and women in the armed services.

Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, president, in a recent visit to Midwestern branches, stressed the importance of keeping a steady flow of readable books and games in good condition to the proper authorities.

Mrs. Florence Kahn of Baltimore, vice president and national chairman of contests, is expected to make a report on prizes being offered.

A Fine Thesis Weakened In 'Happy Land', Capitol; Ina Ray Hutton on Stage

IN AN UNHAPPY sort of way "Happy Land," the new screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater, attempts to lay inspirational emphasis upon the fact that anyone who has enjoyed the richness of living in this abundant land of ours over a span of even a few short years has lived a full life to which future years could add little.

It is a noble thesis that has been lamentably weakened only by the ineptness with which the MacKinlay Kantor novel has been scenarized by Kathryn Scola and Julien Josephson. It is as if they had been—and we don't say they were—too deeply and lastingly impressed by the immensely moving spiritual qualities of both Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" and Saroyan's more recent "The Human Comedy," in the former of which the dead were brought back to life and in the latter a pal returned to take the place in his home of a youthful hero slain on the field of battle. Both devices are employed in "Happy Land," but in a manner that does not quite ignite the spark.

The chief protagonist of the play is Rusty, the son of Lew Marsh, middle-aged druggist in an average Midwestern town, and Agnes, his wife. They are caught up in the travail of the second world war within their experience. When the senior Marsh's bitterness over the loss of their son on a distant battlefront seems beyond any power of consolation, "Gramp," a veteran of the War Between the States, dead these 20 years or so, returns to earth, visible only to his son, whom he counsels on a leisurely ramble through familiar scenes in the town and over the countryside, where events of the past are brought into vivid relief.

Elements Lack Cohesion

Convinced that his adored Rusty, in his two brief decades, had experienced a full measure of the good and bad of living, Marsh returns to his normal pursuits, comforted by the realization that in his boy was embodied the spirit that is America, and that so long as his kind are born the Nation need have no fear of its future.

That is the picture's purpose. That it falls so far short of fulfilling it is primarily due to the ressurection and woeful underdevelopment of the ethereal figure of "Gramp." It seems to these eyes and ears that nothing has been written into the part to bring conviction either to his son or an audience.

The progress of the story, nevertheless, is punctuated with incidents that in themselves are warm and human, frequently eloquent and occasionally forceful. There is great charm in the Rusty of 5 years, a glorified honesty and compassion in the Rusty of Boy Scout age, and the lilt of youthful romance in his older years when the concerns of young manhood occupy his attention.

There is a homely beauty, too, in the salad days of Lew and Agnes and more than a few emotional tugs in the final sequences of the film, despite their triteness and attenuation. The elements of great impressiveness, in point of fact, all seem to be present in abundance—if they had only been made to tell.

The inadequacies of the screen exhibit are those of authorship, rather than cast.

Don Ameche, as Lew Marsh, is cast in a role vaguely akin to the one he played in "Heaven Can Wait," since again he is called upon to portray a character that ranges from youth to the elderly years. He does so creditably and credibly. Frances Dee brings mature talents and simple charm to the role of Agnes, and the three ages of Rusty are effectively expressed by Larry Olsen, a particularly precocious child actor; James West and Richard Crane. It falls to Mr. Crane's happy lot to woo both Cara Williams and the richly gifted Ann Rutherford. Harry Carey is the "Gramp," who appears so ineffectual through no fault of his own. Henry Morgan, the Tony Cavrek, who returns to take Rusty's place as a brief source of comfort, performs his chore sympathetically and effectively. The others in a tremendously long cast are, in the main, highly competent.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week is something of quite a different color, what with Ina Ray Hutton up there leading her band. Herself a little more subdued than usual, Miss Hutton atones for it by permitting her instrumentalists to be uncommonly strident, singling out several, however, for splendid solo passenges on guitar, trumpet, trombone, sax, drums, and the like.

Songsters Score

In Stuart Foster, the organization has an agreeable baritone, who scored emphatically at yesterday's first performance, and Miss Hutton, too, registered successfully at the microphone in songs and her rousingly irridescent jungle drum number.

The Kim Loo Sisters, a trio of vocal harmonists, closed to a thunder of applause for their "Pistol Packin' Mama," and Wild Bill Ames turned on a variety of voices in a series of vigorous "impressions" that covered a wide range beginning with Mayor LaGuardia and ending with Jimmy Durante, whom he impersonates to the life.

The illuminating issue of the March of Time bearing the title of "Naval Log of Victory;" "Chief Neeley Reports to the Nation," with its comprehensive survey of the service of the WAVES; the Fox Movietone News and Sam Jack Kaufman's splendid overture, introducing Lynn Allison as a singer in Spanish, complete the composite program.

'Love Interest' in an Emotional Story

ANN RUTHERFORD,
one of the most talented of the younger screen actresses, who appears in the principal juvenile feminine role, opposite Richard Crane, in "Happy Land," the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the MacKinley Kantor novel, now on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Don Ameche, Frances Dee and Harry Carey are stars and featured player, respectively

Minstrel in Reverse!

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 9.—Al Jolson, when he arrived here to sing "April Showers" for "Rhapsody in Blue," was so black they had to make him up in white face before they could turn him black for the picture . . . Well, I'll be darned! Abbott and Costello have won for the second time the annual exhibitors' poll of the Showmen's Trade Review to determine the No. 1 box office attraction of 1943. Yet because of Costello's illness, only two pictures reached the screen—"Hit the Ice" and "Who Done It?" That's nice going, fellows. . . . When Jack Warner learned that the office in Hannibal, Mo., where Mark Twain's father practiced law, had a mortgage on it, he paid off the mortgage and gave the place to the Mark Twain Memorial asociation. . . . The VACS sponsored the premiere of "Mrs. Miniver" and gathered a goodly amount for their canteens at Fort MacArthur. They've talked papa Louis B. Mayer into letting them have the premiere of "Madame Curie" for the same purpose.

AL JOLSON

Growing His Part

"Going My Way" must have given Bing Crosby ideas. Now we're calling him "Deacon" Crosby. He grew the silkiest red beard for "Road to Utopia." In playing a round of golf with Jack Platt, from Chicago, and Bob Hope, Bob was heard to remark, "next time you bring that beard on the golf course, put it in a snood. The sight of it has thrown me off my game." . . . Fanny Brice's foot went to sleep while she was sitting at the table. As she got up, it threw her for a curve and she cracked a bone in her ankle. That's the first time I've ever known anything about Baby Snooks to go to sleep—and is daddy laughing!

Got It Bad—and It's Good

Ho Hum and Ho Hum

David Selznick would have you believe because Jennifer Jones and Bob Walker are playing love scenes in "Since You Went Away," there may be a reconcilation. But those close to the couple say when they've finished a scene, they go their separate ways and don't even speak. . . . Gregory Ratoff, when asked how he felt about "The Heat's On," said, "I'm just as happy as a lark"—only he pronounced it l-o-g. I think the trouble with Ratoff's pictures is he's too good an actor. He acts out every part, then he shoots it with lesser actors, and the pictures never quite come off.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, Dec. 9.—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas has unearthed an unusual organization of girls who have come to Washington from the South. They call their club the Disappointing Club. One of the members confessed all to Justice Douglas. "We answer a maid wanted ad," she related. "We say we're willing to do housework. When the interviewer hints about a little cooking, we say we'll do all the cooking. When a baby is mentioned, we agree to take care of all babies. And do the gardening, the laundry, etc. When they ask us how much we want we say, 'It's up to you.' Then we agree to report to work Monday morning, but we never show up. When we have disappointed five such prospective employers that makes us eligible for membership in the Disappointing Club."

MOSS HART

Moss Hart will be in Hollywood soon to discuss the possibility of Lieut. Col. William Wyler, the Academy Award winner, doing the movie version of "Winged Victory" . . . Alfred Hitchcock has shed 90 pounds by careful dieting. The first thing Hitchcock did when he arrived here this week to fulfill a long-cherished ambition, he bought a ready-to-wear suit . . . Because the military officials at the Pentagon Building are too busy to do Christmas shopping, a personal shopping service has been installed for them in one of the Pentagon offices. The staff is composed of Washington subdebs, who shop for the officials, without fee.

Ted Lewis, who has weathered every music fad and remains among the top band leaders of the Nation, was walking down Fifth ave. this week, with Goodman Ace, of the Easy Aces. They were stopped by Earl Benham, the tailor. "Ace, you haven't bought a suit from me in a long time," Benham reminded the radio star . . . "Frankly, I can't afford $750 for a suit," Ace replied . . . "$750?" Benham repeated. "But I don't charge $750. You never have had to pay more than $150." . . . "In my tax bracket," Ace exclaimed, "to keep $150 I have to earn $750."

A few months ago the OPA decided that no college professors may be employed there. Five college professors who left OPA—Henderson, O'Leary, Hamm, King and Galbraith—have been replaced by businessmen. These five professors are making over $20,000 a year each as businessmen . . . This week Columbia Films will place Rita Hayworth Welles under suspension of contract because she insists upon being with her husband instead of returning to Hollywood . . . The Ford Motor Co., for the first time, will appeal to the swing lovers rather than to the longhairs. Ford will sponsor Tommy Dorsey's broadcasts five times a week.

Mrs. Janet Roper was head of the Missing Seamen's Bureau of the Seamen's Church Institute until her recent death. One of "Mother" Roper's last assignments was to find a missing seaman named Finn. She sent out her usual tracers and one of these happened to reach Jonathan Finn, the writer . . . Finn became interested in this strange work of Mrs. Roper's and went to interview her. He came away with enough material to fill a book. The book will be called "Mother of Missing Men." It will be published in the spring by Doubleday, Doran.

Columbia Films produces a series of audience-participation shorts called "Community Sing." Cartoon directions on the screen notify the male members of the audiences when to sing, and then when the females are to sing . . . These shorts are being distributed for use in Army camps . . . The producers wanted to change them, to eliminate the female singing sections. The Army officials ordered that no changes be made, because the big, tough G. I.'s like to amuse themselves by pretending to sing the high, falsetto parts.

Lunacy Runs Riot in 'Crazy House,' on Screen at RKO-Keith's

By Marjorie Kelly

If you'd like to view the insane antics of Olsen and Johnson without danger of personal involvement—such as befell the man who sued O. & J. after their "Sons O' Fun" engagement here for chipping his ankle and breaking a bone in his foot—if you'd prefer to sit safely in your seat and watch it happen to other people without risking your own hide, then their film, "Crazy House," which opened at RKO-Keith's yesterday morning, is your dish.

In this one the clowns descend upon Hollywood, stage their own welcoming parade for themselves, just to be sure, and head for the Universal Studios. Universal, however, barricades its gates and everybody runs and hides. They've already made an Olsen and Johnson film and they don't want the place wrecked again.

So the boys make their own movie, borrowing talent where they find it (mostly at Universal) and getting the production financed by an old colonel who is suing NBC for the rights to television, which he claims he invented, and who postdates his checks to 1960, just to make certain the suit will be settled before the checks are cashed.

Rubber - faced, swivel - hipped Cass Daley plays herself and her double, Sadie Silverfish, in the film-within-a-film. She sings "Lament of a Laundry Girl" and "I Oughta Dance," the latter embellished by cavortings such as only Cass is capable of. Patric Knowles is the director who gets fired from Universal for saying he thinks Olsen and Johnson are funny; blond and luscious Martha O'Driscoll is prominently featured, and the melange of talent which the mountebanks somehow manage to cram into their opus includes Allan Jones, Tony and Sally DeMarco, Count Basie and his orchestra, Marion Hutton and the Glenn Miller singers, Chandra Kaly and his dancers, The Delta Rhythm Boys and Leighton Noble and his orchestra. And you'll get a few glimpses of Leo Carrillo, Andy Devine, Robert Paige and Alan Curtis and a great deal of the apostles of corn themselves, who indulge their peculiar brand of humor with hilarious results throughout the film.

There isn't a sensible moment in the film's whole footage, but those who like Olsen and Johnson will enjoy it.

On the supplementary bill the news clips of the action in Tarawa will be of chief interest. There is also a short subject on the work of WAVES, entitled "Cheeley Reports to the Nation," and a color cartoon, "Meatless Tuesday."

Dancers on Shift

Director George Sidney turned night into day on the "Mr. Co-Ed" set. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director needed 75 couples for a dance sequence in the new filmusical. In order to film the scene, he found he had to finished with all the extras by noon. The reason being they were employed at Douglas Aircraft on the midnight shift.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

TWO-FISTED Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, no friend of the Roosevelt Administration, summed up the soldier-vote bill situation when he said that the Eastland substitute would "make it practically impossible for absentee Michigan servicemen to vote."

"A man is entitled to vote as well as to fight," concluded Vandenberg.

One thing he had in mind is the fact that most State legislatures are not scheduled to meet next year, and a number will not meet until after elections. Therefore, it is a safe bet that few legislatures would act on the recommendation of the Eastland bill to pass absentee soldiers' vote legislation.

Vandenberg's statement, together with the fight waged by Senator Scottt Lucas of Illinois, co-author of the original soldier-vote bill, were among the few high points of statesmanship in one of the worst debacles of democracy so far seen among the so-called statesmen of the U. S. Senate.

In contrast, there were many low points, one of them stirred up by white-thatched Senator James M. Tunnell of Delaware, who declared of the Eastland substitute: "If the Senate does not want the boys to vote, let it say so fearlessly. Let us not use a subterfuge and pretend we are giving them something when we are not."

To this, Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina replied: "Doesn't the Senator believe his State is patriotic enough—as are other States—to call a special session of the legislature to provide an opportunity for the precious boys to vote?"

Raging with fury, Tunnell shot back: "Why does the Senator speak so sarcastically by saying 'the precious boys?'"

Smith sputtered in confusion, did not answer the question. Finally regaining his composure after the emotional slip-up, the South Carolinian asked Tunnell if it would be "impossible" to call special sessions of State legislatures. Tunnell replied that it would be "impossible to get the soldiers to vote in accordance with the proposed substitute, and no one knows it any better than the Senator from South Carolina."

"I do not know any such thing," replied Smith meekly.

"Then the Senator doesn't know as much as he should know," countered Tunnell amid laughter from the galleries.

Note: Only Northern Democrats who voted against a clean-cut voting system for soldiers were Walsh of Massachusetts, Walsh of New Jersey (Gov. Edison's new appointee from his own Edison Company), and Rhode Island's Peter Gerry, millionaire descendant of the Gerry who signed the Declaration of Independence.

Red Army to Pause

THE BIG-THREE conference is sure to be followed by a lull on the Russian front. Military experts agree that the Red army will pause to gather strength for the coordinated blow against Germany from the east, west, and south.

Weather will play some part in this lull, for Russian roads are now boggy. But principal factor will be the need to gather forces for the winter drive, timed to strike Germany at the same time as the invasion of western Europe, and a possible operation against the Balkans.

The Red army has advanced so far that lines of supply are stretched thin, and large areas between the fighting front and the bases of supply are ravaged by the see-saw of armies. Roads must be built, wires strung, and rail lines changed back from the German to the Russian gauge.

Thus, the Russian forces will be doing more engineering than fighting in the next few weeks.

One Man—W. Willkie

HERE ARE THE INSIDE facts behind the isolationist book, "One Man—Wendell Willkie," a critical take-off on Willkie's "One World," brought out as a part of the Stop-Willkie campaign.

The author, C. Nelson Sparks, former Mayor of Akron, Ohio, did most of the writing, but the office of Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota and a former secretary of Herbert Hoover had a hand in the book's preparation.

Gerald W. ("Spike") Movius, long - shanked, magazine-writer secretary of Senator Nye, ghost-wrote the first chapter and part of another, also assisted in editing the book. The original manuscript was submitted for suggested changes to both Movius and Ray Richmond, executive secretary of Hoover's "National Committee on Food for Small Democracies," which folded up just before Pearl Harbor.

Another who had a hand in the actual writing was George Briggs, a Minneapolis free-lance writer who served on Sparks' publicity staff while the latter was promoting the campaign of Frank Gannett, New York newspaper publisher, for the GOP presidential nomination in 1940.

The book, a colored narrative of alleged incidents in Willkie's political career—including his story-book nomination by the Philadelphia Republican convention in 1940—is aimed at stamping Willkie as a political accident. It is published by E. C. Rayner, a small New York publisher who went to high school with Sparks in Ohio, according to friends.

Sparks tried to get Publisher Gannett to "angel" the work, but Gannett apparently didn't consider it a good business proposition. The author finally had to put up about $4 000 of his own money. The rest of the initial publishing cost was supplied by the Rayner firm.

'Sir Walter Raleigh' Ramey

BROAD-SHOULDERED Representative Homer A. Ramey of Ohio, who collects old coins, almost collected some money from an unexpected source the other day.

As Ramey was about to leave his apartment hotel for the office, he noticed an elderly lady in the lobby who seemed in great distress. Burdened with two large suitcases, she was trying to make a train but couldn't find a porter.

"Let me help you, lady," offered the Ohio Congressman. He carried the suitcases outside to a taxi. As he was about to leave, the woman handed him 35 cents.

"Thank you, George," she said.

Red-faced, the $10,000-a-year Congressman returned the tip. "My name's not George," he explained diplomatically. "That's the name of the porter in this apartment house."

PARTY LINES are PATRIOTIC LINES

The copper that used to go into new telephone lines is now going into war weapons. This means we must make the most of the lines we now have.

Thus, party lines become a part of the all-out war effort — they take on a new name — PATRIOTIC LINES.

You will find that "Patriotic-line" telephone service is good telephone service if all users will follow these simple rules:

1. If another is using the line, hang up gently and wait a reasonable time before trying again.
2. Make way for your neighbor by being as brief as you can on your calls.
3. Avoid making a number of calls in succession.
4. Replace the receiver carefully after each call so as not to prevent others from using the line.

Rep. Lewis Of Colorado Dead at 64

Representative Lawrence Lewis, 64, Colorado's only Democratic member in the House, who had served since 1933, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital after a protracted illness.

Mr. Lewis first became ill while campaigning in Colorado more than a year ago. The voters returned him to Congress but it was not until September 14 that he was able to resume his duties. He entered the hospital November 16 when he again became ill.

Mr. Lewis was the sixth member of the House to die during the present session of Congress and the fourth within the past three weeks.

A native of St. Louis, Mo., Mr. Lewis attended the University of Colorado for two years and later was graduated from the Harvard Law School. He also served as an English teacher at Harvard.

Announcement of his death yesterday brought an abrupt end to the day's legislative program in the House. Numerous fellow members rose to pay him tribute as they had applauded his return to the floor a few weeks earlier.

Mr. Lewis' office said yesterday that funeral services will be held tomorrow in Cincinnati, Ohio, where his mother and brother are buried.

Representative Lewis is survived by two cousins, Capt. Stanley Lewis and Capt. Walter Scott, both of the Army and both stationed in Washington.

Maj. Vincent F. Harrington

Maj. Vincent F. Harrington, 40, USAAF, the first Congressman to resign from office to join the armed forces, was eulogized by Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat) of Massachusetts and other Representatives yesterday after it was learned that he died in England, where he was on active duty.

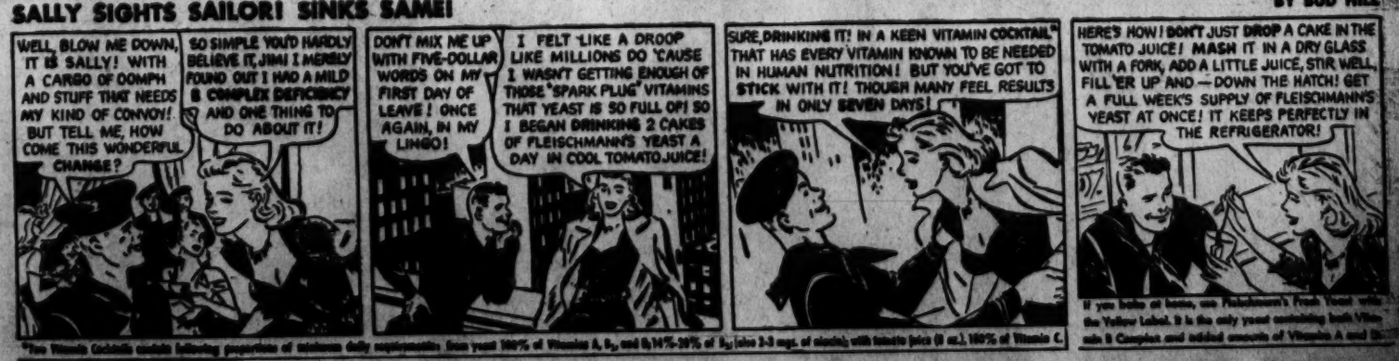
SALLY SIGHTS SAILOR! SINKS SAME! — BY BUD HILL



WELL, BLOW ME DOWN, IT IS SALLY! WITH A CARGO OF OOMPH AND STUFF THAT NEEDS MY KIND OF CONVOY! BUT TELL ME, HOW COME THIS WONDERFUL CHANGE?
SO SIMPLE YOU'D HARDLY BELIEVE IT, JIMI I MERELY FOUND OUT I HAD A MILD B COMPLEX DEFICIENCY AND ONE THING TO DO ABOUT IT!
DON'T MIX ME UP WITH FIVE-DOLLAR WORDS ON MY FIRST DAY OF LEAVE! ONCE AGAIN, IN MY LINGO!
I FELT LIKE A DROOP LIKE MILLIONS DO 'CAUSE I WASN'T GETTING ENOUGH OF THOSE "SPARK PLUG" VITAMINS THAT YEAST IS SO FULL OF! SO I BEGAN DRINKING 2 CAKES OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST A DAY IN COOL TOMATO JUICE!
SURE, DRINKING IT! IN A KEEN VITAMIN COCKTAIL THAT HAS EVERY VITAMIN KNOWN TO BE NEEDED IN HUMAN NUTRITION! BUT YOU'VE GOT TO STICK WITH IT! THOUGH MANY FEEL RESULTS IN ONLY SEVEN DAYS!
HERE'S HOW! DON'T JUST DROP A CAKE IN THE TOMATO JUICE! MASH IT IN A DRY GLASS WITH A FORK, ADD A LITTLE JUICE, STIR WELL, FILL 'ER UP AND—DOWN THE HATCH! GET A FULL WEEK'S SUPPLY OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST AT ONCE! IT KEEPS PERFECTLY IN THE REFRIGERATOR!

*Two Vitamin tablets contain following proportions of minimum daily requirements: Yeast 100% of Vitamin A, B_1, and B_2; 14%-20% of B_6; also 2-3 mgs. of niacin; with tomato juice (8 oz.), 100% of Vitamin C.

If you bake at home, use Fleischmann's Fresh Yeast with the Yellow Label. It is the only yeast containing both Vitamin D Complex and added amounts of Vitamins A and B.
